

1945: Mopping Up – Overview

The 6 June D-Day invasion of the beaches of Normandy the previous summer was a success, but there was still a long slog ahead in 1945 to drive the Germans from France and the Benelux countries. As the winter turned into 1945, the Germans made a last-ditch offense at the Battle of the Bulge fighting across Luxembourg, eastern Belgium, and northern France.

In early April, U.S. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt died after over 12 years in office. He had led the country out of the Great Depression and now this World War was ending.

In mid-April war correspondent Ernie Pyle was killed on a small island near Okinawa in the Pacific. His column, printed in the Democrat, was a significant part of war news for folks in Pulaski County.

In late April, Adolf Hitler committed suicide, and Germany surrendered soon thereafter. Europe was finally at peace with the surrender of Germany on 8 May 1945 (V-E Day). Japan fought on relentlessly until the US dropped two atomic bombs on the Japanese mainland in August. The world was finally at peace when the Japanese surrendered on 2 September 1945 (V-J Day). The next month, the United Nations was established.

Back home, the munitions factory in nearby LaPorte County closed in August 1945. Life did not immediately return to normal. Shortages of some items, such as sugar, cheese, and butter, continued for a while after the war ended. Most importantly, Our Boys began to come home.

In that last year of the war, fifty-one more of Our Boys died. Here are some of their stories.

Jay was two years older than his brother, Jack, both of whom were born in or near Winamac. Jay, a marine, was killed in action in 1943.

Jack had worked at Kocher's Meat Market in Winamac before he Entered in May 1944. His boss, A. E. Kocher, closed his business that same month. Not only had he lost Jack, his sons, Harry and Arthur, had also Entered before Jack. A naval petty officer, Harry was killed in the European Theater in 1944. Jack died 29 January 1945, during the end of the Battle of the Bulge in Luxembourg.

Butch was among the first to land and die on Iwo Jima. Maurice McFadden's best friend, A. J. "Tex" Stanton, talked about his death. They were on a "mop up" campaign on Iwo Jima when a mortar struck, killing Maurice and blowing Tex's feet off.

Amanda of Winamac lost two great-nephews. In 1945, West Point graduate Allen was declared dead after missing for almost a year in Burma. Later that year, his older brother, Jack, was killed in Europe. Their parents were now childless.

In the same unit, Winamac buddies, George and Henry, were killed four days apart on Corregidor Island in Manila Bay. Henry's mother had now lost a son in each world war. A month after George and Henry died, Jack became the third and last fatality in the group of six Pulaski County men in the 151st Infantry unit of the 38th Division. There would have been many more deaths, particularly if the Allies had invaded Japan as planned. But the war ended in the late summer, and thankfully, the death rate dropped precipitously.

Tell Me about My Boy

A profile of each fallen serviceman is in the following section, "The Dead".

Also lost that year, Brownie, a local dog volunteered for the war effort, was killed in action. Three other canine volunteers from Pulaski County were discharged at war's end.

Andrew earned his Distinguished Service Cross, second only to the Medal of Honor.

"Snooky" earned his Soldier's Medal, the highest non-combat medal, when he and his three-person unit "... with complete disregard for their personal safety, they heroically save from loss valuable and irreplaceable equipment which was in danger of being destroyed as result of a gasoline fire."

Wint earned his Silver Star when he "crawled through devastating barrages and saved the lives of his comrades".

The awards of at least 12 Presidential Unit Citations, 63 Bronze Stars, and 9 Silver Stars were mentioned in 1945 newspaper items, although some may have been awarded in prior years. Here are some of their stories. Albin earned his Bronze Star and a field commission after he used his assault gun to drive enemy from a bridge they were preparing for demolition. On a later occasion, he and another officer captured 123 with only one shot fired.

Allen earned his Bronze Star by advancing his observation post unit across the heavily-defended river while under intense enemy fire to direct friendly artillery to silence enemy fire on moving troops.

Barney earned a Bronze Star when, as an artillery observer, he stood up, exposing himself to machine gun and rifle fire, to rally troops to take their objective.

Bill earned his Bronze Star when "in disregard of his own life, [he] rushed into an ammunition dump which had been set afire by the Japs, and backed out his truck, saving vital equipment".

Clifford earned his Bronze Star when he moved a heavy machine gun into position to repulse an attack.

Edmond earned his Bronze Star when along the Siegfried Line, he "courageously dismounted from his tank destroyer and went forward on foot, despite enemy machine gun and artillery fire. Locating two enemy tanks, he returned to his vehicle and destroyed both".

Previously twice wounded, Lloyd was awarded Bronze Star when he "operated the guns of an immobilized tank with great success during a German attack".

Under extremely heavy artillery and small arms enemy barrage, another of Our Boys named Lloyd earned a Bronze Star by administering first aid to two wounded and returning them to the medics.

When a kamikaze pilot hit his ship, although wounded, Jack, a radio operator, earned a Bronze Medal for assisting in the evacuation of other wounded from the ship's smoke-filled interior and directing fire-fighters to reach other wounded men.

1945: Mopping Up – Overview

In 1945, there were at least 33 meetings statewide or abroad. Most were two or three, but one had six of Our Boys. A few were on the high seas. The rest were split between Europe and South Pacific, including many in the Philippines. Most were brothers, cousins, classmates, or brothers-in-law. The rest were friends and other Pulaski County residents. Most were planned, including travels of one and three hundred miles to visit a brother in Europe. Two brothers met three times when stationed thirty miles apart. There were some accidental meetings, when assigned to the same ship. Doc and Joe found themselves sitting beside each other at a Bob Hope USO show. Stanley joined a few Logansport boys and 400 other boys from "back home" on Hoosier Day in the Mariana Islands.

Our Boys had other experiences that year. After a field operation for appendicitis, Stanley was carried by stretcher 60 miles over five days by Chinese coolies, during an assignment behind Japanese lines. Charles was on a 50-caliper "ack ack" crew defending the airstrip at Sint, Burma and getting his first taste of combat in a night attack, thereby winning faint praise from Tokyo Rose. With the war ending, Little Joe, who had emigrated with his brother in 1927, was able to visit with his parents and two sisters in Essen, Germany, finding them in good health and their home unharmed by the war.

The details of these stories and others are in the following section, "War Stories".

There was more war news besides Our Boys in the paper.

Early in the year, there was a short-lived shortage of coal, when world-wide prices rose as coal production of Germany declined.

The only deaths on US soil occurred when a Jetstream-borne Japanese firebomb landed in an Oregon forest and was detonated by picnickers. Five children and one adult died.

At least 24 of Our Boys were freed as German prisoners of war. Only two were identified as Japanese prisoners of war, and they died in custody.

The death camps came to light in articles in the Logansport dailies.

And after V-J Day, Kingsbury Ordnance Plant closed. During the war years, it had 20,000 workers producing half-billion shells and fuses.

At the end of 1945, the published Honor Roll numbered 64. These men lived in Pulaski County at the time of their interment or were very strongly connected to it by blood or marriage.

The details of these stories are in this chapter's section, "Also in the Paper".

1945: Mopping Up – Community Climate

This is a summary of the news in print available to most residents of Pulaski County in 1945. The primary news sources were two competing local weeklies which focused only on local news except for government news related to farming. A nearby daily newspaper provided state, national, and international news, including progress in the war. There was no internet, no television, and extremely limited news on the radio and in movie theatres.

About two-thirds of the headlines was war news evenly split between Europe and the South Pacific. After the war ended, less than a tenth of the primary news was about post war issues, including the Japanese politics and the atom bomb, and less than a fifth of the news was about labor problems, i.e., strikes and threats of strikes.

Navigator Lost Over Germany Last January

First Lt. Ross Cullen, Missing Nearly a Year, Now Declared Dead

First Lt. Ross A. Cullen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot Cullen of Winamac, was killed in action January 2, 1945, over Trier, Germany, according to word received by the parents from the War Department. He had previously been reported missing.

The parents had already learned that the B-17 on which Lt. Cullen was navigator had exploded just before its bomb load was dropped. Only one crew member survived, after having been wounded and taken prisoner. It is his report which now establishes the death, as disclosed in a letter and telegram received last week.

The young officer was born June 17, 1921. He graduated from Lakeview high school in Chicago in 1939, and was employed there before enlisting in the Air Corps in August of 1942. Commissioned as

With the Eighth Air Force, he received his promotion in November, and the mission on which he was lost was his thirtieth. Lt. Cullen had been awarded four oak leaf clusters for his Air Medal. Mr. and Mrs. Ed Freeman received a letter Monday from the Army Air Forces Headquarters at Washington, D. C., giving them some additional information regarding their son, Lt. Bernard Freeman, who was reported missing between Guadalcanal and Morotai Island since January 4, 1945. It stated in part:

"Additional information has been received indicating that Lt. Freeman was co-pilot of a B-24 (Liberator) bomber which participated in a mission on January 4. The report reveals that your son's bomber was neither seen nor contacted after it departed from a base on Los Negros Island, and the time, place and circumstances relative to its loss are unknown. It is further indicated that a search was instituted but no further information has been received in this headquarters as to the whereabouts of Lt. Freeman.

"Please be assured that a continuing search by land, sea and air is being made to discover the whereabouts of our missing personnel."

A list of the other six men on the plane was enclosed, along with names of next of kin, in case families of those men wish to contact each other.

Lt. Bernard Freeman Failed To Return from Mission Jan. 4, 1945

Second Lt. Bernard G. Freeman, who has been missing since January 4, 1945, has now been declared dead by the War Department.

This information was enclosed in a letter from Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell of the Adjutant General's office, received Saturday by Lt. Freeman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Freeman of Winamac.

It stated, in part:

"The records concerning your son show that he departed in a B-24 bomber from Morotai Island for Guadalcanal. Radio contact was made upon arrival at Los Negros Island, Admiralty Islands, after which no further contact with the plane was made. Extensive searches were conducted over the intended route, including an area twenty miles on each side of the route, without finding any trace of the plane or personnel!"

"Full consideration has recently been given to all available information bearing on the absence of your son, including all records, reports and circumstances. These have been carefully reviewed and considered. In view of the fact that twelve months have now expired without the receipt of evidence to support a continued presumption of survival, the War Department must terminate such absence by a presumptive finding of death."

LT. BERNARD FREEMAN.

The young man was born May 21, 1921, in Starke county, but spent most of his life in Winamac, highly esteemed by many friends. A graduate of the local high school in 1939, he enlisted in the Air Corps in February of 1941. He received training in radio and gliders, later being admitted to pilot's training. Lt. Freeman received his wings and commission January 7, 1944, at Douglas Field, Ariz., and went overseas a few months later.

Surviving, besides the parents, are brothers Glenn, overseas with the Army; Herbert of Knox, recently discharged from the Air Corps; Charles of Valparaiso; sisters Mrs. Olive Werner of Winamac and Mrs. Thelma Corder of Houston, Tex.

Lost Year, Say Flier Now Dead

Reported missing a year ago while on a South Pacific flight, Lieut. Bernard G. Freeman was reported officially dead this week, according to a War Department letter received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Freeman.

Lieut. Freeman, 24 years old, enlisted in February, 1941, and had been overseas in the South Pacific area for 20 months. A graduate of Winamac high school, he was one of twins. His brother, Vernon, died at the age of 10 months.

He received his final training and was graduated a second lieutenant from the Douglas Airport, Douglas, Arizona, in January, 1944.

The letter to the parents said, in part:

"Since your son, Second Lieutenant Bernard G. Freeman, Air Corps, was reported missing January 4, 1945, the War Department has entertained the hope that he survived and that information would be revealed dispelling the uncertainty surrounding his absence. However, as in many cases, the conditions of warfare deny us such information. The record concerning your son shows that he departed in a B-24 (Liberator) bomber from Pitoe Air-drome, Morotai Island, for Carney Field, Guadalcanal, Solomon Islands. Radio contact was made upon arrival at Momote, Los Negros Island, Admiralty Islands, after which no further contact with the plane was made. Extensive searches were conducted over the intended route, including an area twenty miles on each side of the route without finding any trace of the plane or personnel."

Full consideration has recently been given to all available information bearing on the absence of your son, including all records, reports and circumstances. These have been carefully reviewed and considered in view of the fact that twelve months have now expired without the receipt of evidence to support a continued presumptive finding of death, accordingly an official finding of death has been recorded under the provisions of Public Law 490, 77th Congress, approved March 7, 1942, as amended.

The finding does not establish an actual or probable date of death; however, as required by law, it includes a presumptive date of death for the termination of pay and allowances, settlement of accounts and payment of death gratuities. In the case of your son this date has been set as January 5, 1945, the day following the expiration of twelve months' absence.

I regret the necessity for this message but trust that the ending of a long period of uncertainty may give at least some small measure of consolation. I hope you may find sustaining comfort in the thought that uncertainty with which war has surrounded the absence of your son has enhanced the honor of his service to his country and of his sacrifice.

Missing Man's Plane Crashes, Letter Reveals

Mrs. Clifford G. Baker received a letter last week from the War Department in reference to her husband, who was reported as missing in action over Germany since February 21. Parts of the letter follow:

"Additional information has been received indicating that Sgt. Baker was the gunner on an A-26 bomber which participated in a combat mission to Lage, Germany, on February 21. The report reveals that during this mission, while leaving the target, your husband's bomber sustained damage from enemy anti-aircraft fire. The disabled craft left the formation and subsequently fell to the earth. Because of the intensity of enemy action the crew members of accompanying planes were unable to continuously observe your husband's bomber, and it is regretted that the foregoing constitutes all the information available in this headquarters.

"Please be assured that a continuing search by land, sea, and air is being made to discover the whereabouts of our missing personnel. As our armies advance over enemy occupied territory, special troops are assigned to this task, and agencies of our government and allies frequently send details which aid us in bringing additional information to you."

Addresses of next-of-kin of other members of the crew were enclosed so that Mrs. Baker could get in touch with them.

4,000 Marines Die In 25 Days Of Iwo Battle

Japs Report Warship and Transport Landings North of Iwo; Fighting at an End

GUAM — (UP) — American dead in the 25 days of savage fighting on Iwo have amounted to less than 4,000 compared with Japanese casualties of at least 20,000 killed, front dispatches disclosed Thursday, as the Stars and Stripes were raised over the bloodiest battlefield of the Pacific war.

Marines were still mopping up fanatical enemy troops entrenched in caves on the northern tip of Iwo, but the "major fighting" effort of the leathernecks was said to have been completed.

(Tokyo, quoted by the German transocean agency, said that warships and transports had been sighted north of Iwo, possibly indicating a new American landing.) Vice Adm. Richmond Kelly Turner disclosed American losses had been less than one-fifth of those of the Japanese defenders. United Press Correspondent Mac R. Johnson reported in a dispatch from Turner's flagship off Iwo.

Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz had announced yesterday that at least 20,000 Japanese were killed in the first 24 days of the Iwo battle—a rate of approximately 833 Japanese per day. Iwo covers only eight and one-half square miles.

In proportion to forces engaged, both the U. S. and enemy casualties were the heaviest of the war. On "bloody Tarawa", considerably larger than Iwo, American killed, wounded and missing amounted to 3,069 and Japanese losses to 4,500. On Guam, 26 times the size of Iwo, total American casualties were 7,247 and Japanese 17,701.

Sgt. Melvin Welch Is Victim of Attack on Iwo

Sgt. Melvin Leroy Welch, familiarly known as "Butch" during the three years that he worked in the vicinity of Winamac, was one of the American casualties in the attack on Iwo Jima.

A War Department message received last week end by his wife, the former Miss May Girton, stated that he was killed in action on February 21. This was the second day after the U. S. Marines, of which Sgt. Girton, was a member, made their first landing on that island, against strong Jap resistance.

The young man was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Welch of Hammond, and came here as a lad to work for his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Dodd, while they lived on the former J. M. Baker farm southwest of town. Later he worked for Galen Girton on the R. E. Horner farm. About four years ago he went to Hammond and joined the Marines.

After serving sixteen months in the Southwest Pacific area, undergoing severe battle activities but escaping without a scratch, he was returned to this country on furlough. He and Miss Girton were married on March 5, 1944, at the church in Buffalo, White county.

Following his marriage he was assigned to training camps on the west coast and in Hawaii, receiving promotion from corporal to sergeant.

Sgt. Welch was twenty-four years of age last August 28. Surviving, besides the wife and parents, is a sister, in California.

KIDS ENJOY TRICK BICYCLIST

Tuesday was a great day for small boys here, not to mention some of the older boys, who hugely enjoyed themselves at two performances by a trick bicyclist. The first performance was given at 10 o'clock in the morning in front of The Republican office. At 8 in the evening the bicyclist went through the same evolutions with bicycles varying in height from one to eight feet. As an added attraction in the evening he jumped over little Dick Norton, who nervously lay down in the street for the sum of a quarter.

"Cpl. Clausen distinguished himself by heroic action in connection with military operations . . . on March 4, 1945. During the attack on Orenhofen, Germany, Cpl. Clausen traveled three hundred yards with a radio over terrain covered by heavy mortar and machine gun fire from the enemy, and with no friendly troops in front of him. Through his efforts in getting the radio to an observation post, mortar fire was placed on the enemy in time to disrupt a counterattack which was in progress. In returning the radio to his company, where it was urgently needed, Cpl. Clausen was mortally wounded. His steadfast courage and devotion to duty reflect great credit upon himself and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces."

In addition to the above recognition, the Chicago Retail Drugists Association, in their daily radio program over station WIND, saluted Cpl. Clausen today.

Widow Receives Letter from Colonel Of Husband's Unit

Mrs. Chester Freel of Harrison township last week received a letter from the colonel of the unit to which Lt. Chester Freel belonged. The young man died of wounds suffered on March 7 in Italy. The letter follows:

Dear Mrs. Freel:

As Chester's Regimental Commander, I extend to you my deepest sympathy in behalf of myself, my officers and my men, in this hour of grief and sorrow. We know how you must feel, for all of us here share your grief with you. You have given your beloved husband. We have lost a fine officer, a real man, and a true friend.

Without a doubt, Chester was the outstanding officer of this regiment. He was possessed of an initiation and interest in his work that drew special attention to him. It was for this reason that I selected him to receive a battle-field commission when his unit was in need of an officer to handle supplies. He had done the job in a superior manner as an enlisted man. When he became a commissioned officer, he proved to me that I had not been wrong in my judgment. He was respected and admired by all who knew him.

At just about dark, one evening, Chester was in a battered village in the mountain country of northern Italy. He was supervising and assisting in the loading of a mule train which was to take rations to units on the front lines. While the loading was going on, the Germans threw some heavy caliber artillery-shells into the area. One of the shells struck the side of a near by stone house and exploded. One of the fragments hit your husband in the chest and came out through his back.

Chester was rushed to an aid-station close at hand and was given treatment. A little later he was evacuated to a hospital, in the rear area. All of us hoped he would pull through but the shock and the fragment were too much for him. He died soon after we arrived at the hospital.

Chester was buried with appropriate religious ceremonies by one of our chaplains in an American Military cemetery in northern Italy. There he sleeps the Sleep of Peace by the side of other great Americans who, like him, have laid down their lives, that freedom-loving people all over the world might have preserved for them the God-given right to be free.

We already miss Chester. I know that we will always miss him. We will not forget him. If I can assist you in any way, please let me know.

Sincerely,
WALDON S. LEWIS,
Colonel, Infantry

Officer's Letter Sent to Missing Pilot's Parents

Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Snyder received further word Friday regarding their son, T/Sgt. Dudley Snyder, who was reported as missing in action since March 22 over Austria. A letter written by his commanding officer, Major General N. F. Twining, follows:

"Another of the few oil refineries left to the Nazis underwent a heavy bombardment on March 22, 1945, when Liberators of this air force attacked Vienna, Austria. Over the target, the ship in which your son, Technical Sergeant Dudley Snyder, was flying as radio operator-gunner, became disabled when it received a direct flak hit.

in the bomb bay. Because of the serious damage, the plane left the formation and began to lose altitude in a spin. Observers report that one parachute was seen before the stricken aircraft finally passed from sight. Since that time, Dudley and his crew have been missing in action.

"Your son's personal possessions have been gathered and will be sent to the Effects Quartermaster, Army Effects Bureau, Kansas City, Mo., from which place they will be forwarded to the designated beneficiary.

"In recognition of the splendid service he has rendered his country during her hour of need, Dudley has been awarded the Air Medal with one oak leaf cluster. I share your anxiety for his safety. The War Department will notify you immediately should there be a change in your son's status."

Missing Pulaski Flier May Be Alive, His Chaplain Tells Father

WINAMAC, Ind., April 25 — Tech. Sgt. Dudley Snyder, who was reported missing in action since March 22, was radio-gunner on a plane which was shot down in a mission over Austria, according to a letter received by the flier's father, Otto Snyder, from Chaplain John Eastwood.

The chaplain informed the father that the plane received a direct hit, but that at least one and possibly four people were seen leaving the plane before it burst into flames and hit the ground. He said it was reasonable to believe that part of the crew was saved. Enclosed were the names and addresses of the parents of the members of the crew.

Missing Flyer Now Listed Among Dead

T/Sgt. Dudley Snyder's Parents Receive Final Word from Department

After having been missing a full year, T/Sgt. Dudley Snyder is now regarded by the War Department as dead, according to a letter received during the past week by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Snyder of Winamac.

On duty as radio man on a bombing plane, the young sergeant was reported missing over Austria as of March 22, 1945. He was based in southern Italy, but was not with his regular crew at the time, having volunteered to take the place of the regular radio man in another crew who was unable to go. Only one of the group survived the crash that cost the others their lives. He was severely burned and is still in a hospital in this country, but has written to members of the Snyder family several times, telling them of Dudley's activities.

Other buddies of the lost flyer have corresponded with the family, and one recently made a special trip here from Findlay, Ohio, to tell parents and sisters of the esteem in which he was held. Buddies have also revealed that fire destroyed the outfit's tent a short time after Dudley was lost, and that but few of his effects could therefore be sent home.

Records Reveal Loss of Plane.

The official letter from the War Department carries the following: "The records concerning your son reveal that he was a crew member of a B-24 (Liberator) aircraft which departed from Pantanella Air Base, Italy, 22 March 1945, on a bombing mission. As soon as the formation entered the target area, in the vicinity of Vienna, Austria, your son's aircraft received a direct hit by enemy antiaircraft fire, went into a spin, and blew up. Only one chute was seen leaving the plane. The one crew member who is known to have survived stated that he had an impression of seeing your son apparently unconscious on the floor near the waist windows of the plane. He could not tell whether or not your son was wounded. However, this crew member stated that as he had been injured by flak, he suspected that your son may also have been wounded, as he and your son were standing near each other when the plane was hit."

Well Known in Native Town.

Dudley was born in Winamac on January 15, 1921, and spent his entire life here, popular among all acquaintances. He graduated from the local high school in 1939, and entered service less than two years later, in February of 1941. Bernard Freeman and James Hair enlisted in the Air Corps at the same time, and all three went to Rantoul, Ill., for training. Bernard became a lieutenant and was lost in the Pacific theater about two months before Dudley failed to come back. Hair has returned home following his discharge.

Besides his parents, Dudley leaves three sisters—Miss Bessie Snyder of Indianapolis, Mrs. Jeanette Stark of Chicago, and Mrs. Annabelle Mangold of Winamac.

A public memorial service in honor of the lost flyer are to be held at St. Peter's church in Winamac on Saturday of next week, April 13, at 9:00 a.m.

Posted 18 Jan 2016 by LastSearch

A granite memorial stone lies in the Palestine Cemetery, Palestine, Kosciusko Co Indiana as a memorial to Lieutenant Harold Hadley Stickler, born 19 November 1920 in Indiana. He was with the 34th Bomb Squadron, 17th Bomb Group and is listed as a Casualty WWII. It is not known when he joined the 34th.

The 34th presently is the 4th oldest active squadron in the US Air Force, being formed on 10 May 1917, less than a month after the US entered WWI.

Shortly after the attack on Pearl Harbor, the 34th flew anti-submarine warfare patrols in the Pacific NW from 22 Dec 1941 to March 1942. It was reassigned to Lexington Co. Airport, SC, on 9 Feb 1942 to meet the threat from German subs operating off the East Coast. At that time, the only B-25s in service were with the 17th Bombardment Group.

In November 1942, the squadron deployed to North Africa; in December 1942 it was part of Operation Torch and assigned to the new 12th Air Force in Algeria, with tactical bombing raids on enemy targets in Algeria and Tunisia. It remained with the Mediterranean Theater of Operations for several years. The squadron flew combat missions in the invasion of Sicily, the invasion of southern Italy, the Corsica Campaign, and the invasion of southern France during the summer of 1944.

Moving into France, the squadron supported American ground forces moving north through Lyon and eventually joined American forces in eastern France which had participated in the northern France Campaign after the Normandy D-Day landings in June of 1944, carrying out tactical bombing missions from Lyon Airfield, primarily hitting enemy targets in central and southern Germany until the German capitulation in May 1945. (This was the time period when, it is assumed that Lieut. Harold Hadley Stickler and probably his crew and the plane did not survive a bombing mission.)

After the end of hostilities, the 34th became part of the US Air Forces in Europe occupation forces, assigned to the American Zone of Occupation in Austria until November 1945, when its personnel were demobilized in France and returned to the US.

(He died 2 Apr 1945, about a month before VE Day was declared. He left his parents: LeRoy Wilfa Stickler 1891-1974 and Sylvia Hadley Stickler 1894-1979, a sister Thelma Jane 1919-1995, his grandparents Clayton L. Airman Reported 'Missing' Visits Relatives Here

A tall gunner in an American airplane who was shot down in the European war theater last September and reported "missing in action" a few days later, but who wrote a letter to his family the fore part of January to state that he was safe and sound, visited relatives here over Sunday.

He is Ivan Schraeder of Peoria, Ill., nephew of Mr. and Mrs. William Roth of Winamac. Numerous acquaintances hereabout, gained by Ivan while visiting on the Roth farm in Indian Creek township, know him as "Butch." He made the trip here with his cousin, Vincent Roth, now attending watchmakers' school at Peoria, who spent Sunday with the home folks.

Ivan reveals no military secrets in connection with his experience. He and his companions bailed out of the plane from a height of 26,000 feet, he said, after it had been seriously damaged by enemy fire. He added that he "lit in a cabbage patch then ran like hell." The location of the cabbage patch, and how he got back to this country, are all parts of the untold story.

His safe return is of particular interest to the Roth family, since word reached here on February 15 that their son Richard, a bombardier, was missing in action. The home folks are cheered by the fact that his cousin, similarly reported, escaped without a scratch and was able to write home four months later.

This is the second time S/Sgt. Shrader has been missing in action. Edward Felix Good Except for Ernie Pyle, Edward was burned at reporters who misrepresented morale.

Born: 9/16/1918

Entered: 6/30/1941

Branch, SN, Rank: USA, 35163064, PFC

Medal: Purple Heart

Died: 4/25/1945

Parents: Grover Cleveland and Anna Effie Whipple Good

On 25 April 1945, Edward Good, 27, was killed in Germany by a sniper while driving his commanding officer to the front line. He served 46 months, including about 24 months in the European war zone. He was awarded the Purple Heart. He had relatives in Star City and Winamac. He was buried in the Lorraine American Cemetery in St Avold, France.

'Soldier Jumps Onto 'Writers From the Rear'

Not all of the news writers on the battle fronts are to be depended upon, according to PFC Edward F. Good, a nephew of Osa Whipple of Winamac. Following are excerpts from a letter which he wrote "somewhere in Europe" on January 17:

"I got your box of cigars a couple of weeks ago, and they are all gone by now. It's snowing again, and we already had about a foot of it. I'm sure lucky this winter because I don't have to be out in the weather much except when I am driving. We have a good dug-in hole here. Had one in the other position but we had to withdraw from there, so we burned it up."

"Some of those guys who claim they came over here and have been up front and then go home and write up in the papers what the boys over here think, sure give us a pain. We haven't even seen any of them here in this sector. They must all stay back to the rear except Ernie Pyle. I read an article one of them wrote about none of the boys wanting to come home till this war was over. He said he couldn't find 60 men out of 100 who did. If he wants to come here, I can show him a whole battery who have been over here twenty months and who want to take a visit home. To hear him tell it, getting the Jerry's is just like shooting rabbits. If I didn't know better I might have believed it. When you have never seen about 300 crazy SS troops come at you when your company isn't even full strength, you know different and would like to get your hands on some of those writers who ride around the rear burning up gas."

PFC Edw. Good, Artilleryman, Killed in Europe

PFC Edward F. Good, grandson of Mrs. Felix Whipple of the Winamac vicinity, was killed in action in Germany on April 25, it was revealed in a message received Tuesday evening.

The telegram came to the soldier's mother, Mrs. Anna Good of Peru, who has been at Star City for several days helping care for her sister-in-law, Mrs. Dale Whipple, during the latter's illness. The message gave no details, but said a letter would follow.

Pulaski County (IN) Democrat 10 May 1945: 1.

Edward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Good of Peru, worked here about for three years before entering the Army in June of 1942. He was employed by his uncles Ora and Ray Whipple in their gravel business, and by Osa Whipple on the farm.

The young man was in the artillery. A letter which he had written to the home folks was recently printed in The Democrat.

A brother of Edward, PFC William Good, is also with the Army in Germany. A sister, Miss Harriett Good, is in the WACs and is stationed at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. A younger brother, Lewis, is at the parental home and attends school at Peru.

Relatives Learn Details Of Soldier's Death

The manner in which PFC Edward F. Good met his death in Germany on April 26 was learned by relatives here while his brother, PFC William Good, was here on a visit. Edward was driving a jeep in which his commanding officer was riding to the front line. A sniper's bullet struck Edward in the breast, killing him instantly. The jeep overturned on the roadside, but the officer escaped without injury, as he himself related in a letter to William. Accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Anna Good of Peru, William visited a few days ago in the home of Mrs. Good's mother, Mrs. Felix Whipple. Edward lived in that home for three years before entering the Army in 1942. As a member of a medical detachment, PFC William has been in numerous engagements, but his only injuries were wrist wounds treated at a first-aid station.

Thunderbolt Nose Dives To Earth on Farm Near New Harmony

Willard H. Moose, 32, of 2508 MacArthur Circle, civilian test pilot for Republic Aviation corporation, was instantly killed about 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the Thunderbolt plane he was flying crashed in a field about three and a half miles southwest of New Harmony.

He was on a routine flight at the time and cause of the crash had not been determined last night. Col. A. J. Beck, AAF representative at Republic, appointed an investigating board.

The plane, which fell on the Elmer Elliott farm near an oil well, was a complete wreck, Col. Beck stated.

He said oil field workers reported the plane circled the neighborhood several times at an altitude of between 400 and 500 feet, (Continued on Page 2, Column 5) then nose-dived suddenly to the ground.

"The pilot apparently realized he was in trouble and was looking for a place to land when the ship crashed," Col. Beck said.

Moose was the first civilian test pilot employed by Republic to be killed since the local plant opened. In that time more than 18,000 test flights have been flown, Republic representatives said.

Among witnesses to the crash were Chester Morris, a tenant on the Elliott farm, and Leonard Ricketts. They said the plane nosed deep into the ground, breaking an underground oil pipe and causing oil to flow over the field.

Gasoline also poured out of the plane but it did not catch fire. Morris and Ricketts ran to the plane immediately after the crash. They said the pilot had been thrown from the plane by the impact and that his head was badly crushed.

Moose, a native of Winamac, had been an aviator for more than 12 years. He came to Evansville in March, 1943, as a test pilot for the Modification Center. When the center was closed he transferred to Republic and had been there since Oct. 1, 1944.

For nearly five years Moose was connected with the Murphy Flying Service in Findlay, O. Later he was employed by the Linco Gas company as a "skywriter."

He also gave air shows for the Missouri Institute of Aeronautics and was an instructor in aerial acrobatics.

Surviving are the wife, Marcile; a daughter, Marcia Louise, eight months old; a brother, Alvie, of South Bend; the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Moose, Jr., of Winamac; and a grandmother, Mrs. Fred Moose, Sr., of Medaryville.

The body will be at the Lowe and Son funeral home until 4 o'clock this afternoon, when it will be taken to Winamac. Funeral services will be held Wednesday in Winamac.

Learn Son Was Drowned Following Plane Crash

A letter from the War Department received Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ludwig of Tippecanoe township, confirmed a previous telegram telling of the death of their son, T/Sgt. Lester Ludwig, by drowning in Burma on July 27. The letter stated that the plane in which T/Sgt. Ludwig was a crew member crashed in the Irrawaddy river near the town of Myitkyna, Burma.

No other details of the mishap were given but the letter stated the parents would soon receive further information from their son's commanding officer and chaplain.

Parents Learn Details of Son's Death Overseas

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ludwig of Tippecanoe township have received a letter from Maj. Albert G. Karnell, chaplain of the Northern Air Service Area Command in India, of which their son, T/Sgt. Lester C. Ludwig, was a member. It explains in detail how the sergeant lost his life.

"On July 27," the letter reads, "while engaged in his customary work as crew chief on a routine flight, Lester's plane crashed in the Irrawaddy river near Myitkyna, Burma. Lester was drowned while attempting to swim ashore from the sinking plane.

"Indeed our hearts were heavy when we heard the news that he had passed away. We all loved Lester very much. We had trained together back in the States, travelled the high seas, and worked together here in India. Lester was always most cordial, well liked, and highly respected by all with whom he came in contact. We all knew him as one who possessed the unusual trait of winning his way into the hearts of all.

"Lester was laid to rest in Burma on August 1, the Protestant burial service being conducted by Chaplain John C. Searcy. Full military honors were accorded and many of Lester's friends made a special trip to Burma in order that they might attend."

Letter Tells Of Son's Heroic Act Before Death

A letter received by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ludwig of Tippecanoe township from the commanding officer of the flight detachment of which their son, T/Sgt. Lester Ludwig, was a member, gave them the first details of the mishap in which the young crew chief lost his life. It follows, in part:

"Lester died as the result of an airplane crash in Burma, when his ship landed on the Irrawaddy River. He had taken over the job of crew chief on the airplane, three days before, and was on a routine flight from here. The pilot was able to bring the ship down on the river without seriously injuring any of the people aboard. The co-pilot was, however, pinned in behind the controls, and it took Lester and the pilot a few minutes to free him. As the ship was sinking all the time, this was a real act of heroism, and if it had not been for their efforts, the co-pilot would never have been able to free himself of the ship. Lester and the two pilots went out the escape hatch over the cock pit and slid into the water. He had not been hurt in the crash and was seen to swim away from the ship by the pilot. The airplane sank out of sight right away, and all the men started to swim for the bank. When the rescue boats arrived to pick the men up, Lester and one other man were missing. A very extensive search was made all that day and the next, but no trace could be found.

"Myself and other men from the detachment went into Myitkyina the day of the crash and helped in the search, but as nothing could be found, we returned the next day. Tuesday, the 31st, we received a telephone call that his body had been found and that the funeral would be held the next day.

"Sixteen of his best friends and myself went in for the funeral. He was buried in the United States military cemetery at Myitkyina, Burma, with full military burial. Chaplain John Seracy conducted the service.

"There is some small satisfaction in that Lester was doing the job he liked the best, and that he conducted himself in a manner which brings credit to himself and the United States Army Air Forces. The sympathies of us who knew Lester go out to you, and we know that the loss to you has been great.

Sincerely,
CHARLES L. WOODWARD,
1st Lt., Air Corps,
Commanding.

Twenty years old last December 29, he spent nearly his entire life in the Lake Bruce vicinity, attending St. Peter's school and the Winamac high school. He was a member of the Holy Name Society.

Since that time we have been training as a garrison unit and Thomas was one of the finest soldiers I have had the pleasure of leading. The men in the company, especially those of his platoon, thought the world of him and feel the loss of your son as they would their own brother.

On the 10th of September your son went to the Aid Station for treatment for a fever that he had. His temperature was 103 degrees so he was immediately sent to the hospital, where he could get more and better treatment. His fever turned to pneumonia and yesterday morning at 3 a.m., September 15, he passed away. I checked the reports on his condition upon hearing of his death, and found that he had a relapse Friday night.

In honor of Thomas all the officers and enlisted men of Co. G went to the cemetery and stood for a military funeral with his body. The squad of which he was a member fired three volleys after the Catholic priest performed the last rites, and then our bugler played taps for him. The flag that was used over his casket will be sent to you with all of his personal belongings as soon as we can pack them. We will also send to you the pictures of the ceremony.

County Men Are Members of Hard Fighting Division

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Pugh received a letter this week from their son, T/Sgt. Arthur Pugh, in which he enclosed a copy of the war record of the Fourth Armored Division, including T/Sgt. Pugh, Lt. Albin S. Shank, S/Sgt. Ralph Miller, T/5 Ernest Clouser and S/Sgt. Philip Brucker. The last two named have suffered wounds and Sgt. Brucker is now in the hospital at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

The War Department disclosed that the Fourth Division spearheaded the 3rd Army advance across France. After landing in Normandy on D-Day, it went on to cut off Brittany peninsula and was identified with the hardest fighting in the liberation of France.

The division was credited with smashing 400 enemy tanks, 140 large artillery pieces, 1500 miscellaneous vehicles, and taking 15,000 prisoners, all at relatively low cost to itself. It destroyed the Nazi 77th, 91st, 243rd infantry divisions, the 6th paratroop division and the 281st cavalry battalion. The Germans regarded the men of the Fourth Armored as "Supermen."

The reaction of a German Colonel of shock troops is typical. The Nazi officer, captured by the Fourth, said, "Having been a commander of army units in Russia, I must admit that the American troops are not only equipped with the best material, but what strikes me especially is the excellance of organization under which these men now function. I would be pleased to know the commander of this division."

The Germans described the Fourth as the American Elite Fourth Armored Division and Fourth Panzer, and called the men "ruthless fighters. The unit, commanded by Maj. Gen. John S. Wood, served as part of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army.

Democrat Travels Far; Chinese Share Winamac Sailor's Paper

Proof that The Democrat "gets around"—the world—is shown above in the picture of a Winamac sailor, stationed in China, and two native friends reading the Pulaski County Democrat. The sailor in the picture is Stanley Henry, Ph.M.2/c, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Henry of Winamac. His wife and son also live here. The photo was mailed the middle of December and received by the Democrat office last week. The papers which the men are reading are the issues of June 8, telling of the European invasion, and of July 20.

Accompanying the picture was a letter from the photographer, another Navy man, who wrote: "Your newspaper must have a wide circulation. The enclosed picture impressed me so much that I thought you would be interested in knowing who reads your paper at the four corners of the earth.

"The American in the picture is one of your citizens, but for reasons of censorship and security I can only use his first name, which is Stanley. I met him in a far off part of China and can assure everyone in his town that he is in good health and seems to be enjoying his tour of duty over here, even though I know from experience that he would like it much better at home.

"He informed me that he reads your paper regularly, even though it is sometimes six months en route. He told me when I met him in the first part of December that the Allies had finally invaded Europe. (See date of paper.) It was the only good news we had had in this theatre of war in a long time. It is no doubt hard for the people at home to realize that there are places in the world that even so fine a service as the U. S. Mail is often times six months between calls.

"As far as we are concerned, the Chinese people have set a new high in hospitality. If any of our Allies are having a bad time of it, they should look to the Chinese people for ability to get along under the most adverse of conditions. Whether they feel good or bad, when they greet you it's 'Ting Hao,' pronounced Ding How and means 'the very best of everything.'

"I have read the Democrat so much that I am beginning to feel like one of the local boys. Here's hoping that it keeps coming in the future as it has in the past and that the next big headline is WAR ENDS and we can all come home."

Sailor Relates 5-Day Trip By Stretcher

Stanley Henry, Ph. M. 1/c, of Winamac, who underwent an operation for appendicitis in China in February, tells of subsequent events in a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Henry, written a month after the operation. He makes no mention in the letter of Jap attacks but previously had said that the enemy was getting closer, which undoubtedly accounted for the forced march. He wrote, under date of March 19, in part:

"Expect you think that I have forgotten how to write. Well, it's just that things happened here of late that made it impossible until now. I, along with several of my buddies, just finished a five-day hike of sixty miles. I, of course had to be carried on a bamboo stretcher by four coolies and let me tell you it wasn't any picnic.

"We crossed two large mountains, either of which I could have fallen several hundred feet. As luck would have it, when they did drop me I was pretty near level ground. So everything came O.K. Had a rough time of it due to coolies running away, and rain, sleet, snow and cold. But now that it is over, and I look back to my experiences, I guess it wasn't so bad, but I will have a good story to relate when I get home.

"Mail came in on March 11 and 12. I had six letters, box of stationery, box of canned goods, new pipe and tobacco, newspapers and funnies. (His Christmas gifts) I had to leave some of it behind as there was not enough room to carry it all nor enough time to pass it around. Maybe if things don't get too bad I can get back in another month or so to round it up again.

"I have enough clothes and toilet articles to last awhile but likewise I left lots behind. The food stuff certainly came in handy on our trip. A few others had some food so after pooling it we had several roadside meals.

"Am able to walk a little now but still quite wobbly. The incision should be pretty well healed within a week or so and then I can get outside and walk around. It will be a month tomorrow since my operation and ordinarily it would have been healed long before, but my case was a little different and developed a little trouble.

"Just finished spraying and airing in my bedroll as along the way I picked up fleas and bedbugs. Our place here is very nice, chow is good and I have a heated room for the first time this winter. Spring should be just around the corner as many trees are in bloom and the crops are well up... Don't worry and I'll be seeing you all this summer."

Sailor from Here Plays Part In Activities Against the Japs

It can now be revealed that Stanley K. Henry, pharmacist's mate first class, of Winamac, played a role in one of the most romantic and dangerous episodes of the war against Japan—as a member of a Naval group of guerrillas, intelligence agents and weather observers behind the Japanese lines in Asia.

The group, now known as SACO—Sino-American Co-operative Organization—began shortly after Pearl Harbor as strictly a weather reporting unit.

The project grew until it was providing the U. S. Fleet, the Army's 14th Air Force and the Chinese and American Army headquarters with weather reports and with intelligence on movement of Jap ships, troops and supplies. Finally, it became a dangerous fighting outfit, killing Japs, blowing up trains, raiding Jap outposts. Its activities finally extended all the way from Indo-China to the Gobi Desert.

SACO intelligence allowed the 14th Air Force to mine coastal waters, forcing Jap shipping out to sea, where they were attacked by American submarines. On information from SACO, weather information helped the Navy decide when to stage invasions on Jap Islands and raids on the Jap homeland.

Usually it was possible to enter or depart from Jap territory by air, but SACO Americans became adept at Chinese disguises and, guided by SACO Chinese, slipped through enemy lines when they chose. Through months and years not one SACO member was detected.

Ph. M. 1/c STANLEY K. HENRY

The above report was sent to The Democrat from Washington. Petty Officer Henry is now at home on leave with his wife and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Henry of Winamac. Mr. Henry states that he was sworn to secrecy about the operations during the time he was there and for six months after the war was over.

Ex-Serviceman Tells Club of Months in China

Stanley Henry of Winamac, recently discharged from the Navy, in which he served as a pharmacist's mate, held an attentive audience at the Kiwanis meeting Tuesday by relating some of his experiences. He was in a medical outfit of about thirty men that was flown into China, where a relief outpost was maintained.

The outfit was so far removed from other stations, he stated, that small groups of the men would travel on foot to a point sixty miles distant to get their mail. They had no cars or trucks, and scarcely any gasoline to run the electric generator in their hospital. The mail which they finally did receive had been months on the way. He remarked that copies of The Democrat looked "as big as barn doors" to him, even though they were as much as nine months old when they reached him.

Stanley suffered an attack of appendicitis just as the outfit was ordered to move ahead of an approaching Jap army. Surgeons used flashlights in performing an operation, and he was carried on a hand stretcher for five days to the new destination. On top of that, he narrowly escaped two plane crashes on the outward trip.

The nickname is a made word, using the "sail" out of sailor and the "jer" out of soldier.

An intensive training program teaches former doughboys the various phases of harbor-craft operations, supplemented by practical training aboard Liberty ships, motor tow launches and sea mines.

Upon completion of nautical training, the battle scarred GIs will replace harbor-craft soldiers who are slated for front-line duty. Besides lessons in knot-tying, the trainees are given lectures and demonstration in the seaman's art of whipping, splicing, serving, parcelling, worming, care of lines and ropes, first-aid at sea, small boat handling and abandon-ship procedure.

In a recent letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Scheffer of Indian Creek township, Pvt. Scheffer stated that he was feeling fine. He was in several different hospitals after being wounded.

Sergeant Tells of Slaves Liberated In Germany

T/Sgt. Robert E. Hair, now with the Army which occupies a portion of captured Germany, relates some of his observations in a recent letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hair of Winamac. Under date of April 5 he wrote:

"We are living in homes in a German city which wasn't too badly pasted by bombers and shelling. I had the task of moving twenty families out of their homes to make room for our troops. According to the Geneva Convention we can take any civilian property as long as it is used for a military purpose. This automatically places a heavy penalty on looting, which is a tremendously attractive activity to some GI's.

"I am writing this to you on a confiscated German typewriter. We have several German autos in our outfit which are being registered and in time will be used in line of duty. My German is proving very valuable knowledge.

"There are millions of slave laborers being liberated at the moment, and they are streaming home along the highways to Holland, Belgium and France. All are walking, because carts and bicycles would choke the military supply routes. Too bad I can't tell you everything I'd like to."

"Post War Anecdote"

National Magazine Prints Story Written by Ex-G.I. from Winamac

Robert E. Hair, former Winamac boy now employed on a newspaper in Sturgis, Mich., is the author of a Post War Anecdote, a feature in last week's issue of the Saturday Evening Post. The story, related to the author by his uncle Arthur Zellers, who served in England with the Seabees, won for Bob a $100 prize.

Entitled "Something Less Than Heroes," the story is herewith reprinted without permission of the Post:

The 111th Naval Construction Battalion were the first Seabees to arrive in Cornwall, England—though many "common" Navy men were already there—and they expected a hero's welcome. Instead, natives stared unsmiling, getting a pot of ale in the pubs was a struggle, and WRENS at the near-by Royal Navy base tossed them a "hands - across - the - sea - and - that's - all-brother smile" and danced off with the "common" fleet.

Bewildered but resourceful, the Seabees appointed a committee to get the low-down, and one member finally hit upon a clue: wherever he went, the natives glanced at his sleeve. That night he, a chief and a machinist's mate, second class, cornered a lone "common" sailor in a pub, and, with a little warm beer and cider, solved the mystery.

"Y'see," the little sailor explained chummily, "before you guys got here, there was just enough bitters and WRENS to go around."

"Yeah?" The chief lit a cigarette for him.

"And we didn't want any Seabees cutting in," the sailor continued, "so's all we did was tell the natives the Hundred and Eleventh was a battalion of convicts paroled for front-line duty, and yer sleeves proved it."

"Whaddya mean 'sleeves'?" It was a chorus from the Seabees.

The sailor indicated the arm of the man nearest him.

"Those letters, 'CB,'" he said, grinning. "In limey army-and-navy lingo, that means 'confined to barracks.'"

Two brothers met in Germany on Easter Sunday for the first time in three years, after several weeks of searching, as each knew the other was not far away. Sons of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Powers of Winamac, they are Cpl. ceeded to make my way up the steep hill. In my hand and about me I carried heavy demolition charges and when I got within throwing distance I let 'em have it." Dunn said.

Dunn also helped knock out several road blocks along the route leading to Manila. He also stated "there's no danger to handling demolition charges. All you have to do is remain calm and know your job well. A veteran of the Admiralty Islands and Leyte campaigns, Dunn entered the service in January, 1941, trained at Fort Bliss, Texas, and arrived overseas in June, 1943. Rides Over Tokio With Fire Bombs

Here is an eye-witness account of how the huge B-29 bombers of the U. S. Air Force soar 30,000 feet above Japan to drop bombs on Tokio. This was written by Sgt. Alex Rearick, a radar operator aboard one of the bombers. Sgt. Rearick is the son of Mrs. Linette Rearick of Winamac and arrived home Friday to spend a week. He holds the Air Medal and Oak Leaf Cluster for four trips over Tokio.

"Joe, the operations clerk came in right after dinner and informed us we were to go to tonight's mission. This 'bad news' was met with threats against his life. We hopped a truck and went to the line. (Hangars.) The belts of .50 calibre machine gun bullets were waiting and the rest of the afternoon was spent in cleaning guns ad loading ammunition.

"As soon as we were done, the engineer came down to run up the engines to see that they were okay. Then back we went to the area for supper and briefing. After briefing, we went back to the plane and were ready for the takeoff. One by one the B-29's taxied out for the takeoff and for the long flight to Japan.

"Hours later we approached the mainland of Japan in the darkness. Almost immediately Jap searchlights probed the skies looking for us. The long fingers of light (Continued on Page 8)

OVER TOKIO

swept by just missing us. Up ahead we could see the red glow in the sky which marked the burning city of Tokio set afire by the bombers which preceded us.

"More searchlights, red bursts of flak fill the sky. Then, suddenly, we were over the target. The air was bumpy and filled with smoke from the fires in the city. The flak was bursting. You could hear spent pieces rattle off the plane all around us. The searchlights got us in their beams. The bombay doors opened and 10 tons of fire bombs cascaded down into the city to add to the inferno. The city was a sea of flames. Our bombay doors closed and the flak got closer but the pilot went into evasive tactics to get out of the searchlights and bullets.

"We could see the red glow of the burning city 100 miles away as we headed back to our base.

"It was early morning when our home island shows up on the horizon. The green little island is the prettiest sight in the world after a long hard mission.

"We landed and taxied into our place. After crawling out to look over the plane, we found a big hole out on the wing tip—that one came too close."

Sgt. Alex Rearick arrived home Friday after having received his discharge from the Air Corps. A son of Mrs. Arden Rearick of Winamac, he wears the Asiatic-Pacific ribbon with three battle stars and the Distinguished Flying Cross with oak leaf cluster. He was a member of a B-29 crew and flew twenty-six missions over Japan.

Dale writes that the fields there are miniature and average about two acres. Most of the fences are hedge. His letter follows:

"Well here I am somewhere in Ireland.

"The fields here are one and two acres on the average. From the train window the fields look as small as if you were up in an airplane looking down on Indiana farms. The soil looks very rich. Everything looks neat, not even a brush pile in any fence corner. They have mostly hedge fence around the small fields. The railroad freight-cars are no larger than our 1½ ton truck bed.

"There are a lot of thatched roofs on the houses. Most all the buildings are old fashioned. Some of the roofs had green grass growing on them.

"We passed by several apple orchards. One place there was cabbage ready to eat.

"We saw several peat bogs. They cut it out of the ground in pieces about the size of bricks they dry it and burn it in their stoves."

County Soldier In Hitler Dugout

Here is an eye witness account of a visit to Adolph Hitler's Berchesgaden hideout in the Alps by Cpl. Dale Fritz, as told in a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Fritz dated May 6.

"Well, I finally have something interesting to write about. Forty of us in our battery got to go see Hitler's home and hideout near Berchesgaden up in the Alps Mountains. It was a very interesting sight.

"The building on top of the ground were all destroyed but the tunnels down underground weren't hurt a bit. I went down six flights of stairs and there were still more. The tunnels and rooms were fixed up fancy with up-to-date plumbing and electricity and supplies; fancy chinaware and everything to live in luxury.

"I got you a set of book ends (they are just plain but I got them six flights underground) and Pop an ash tray. The French just took the fortress this morning.

"I can look out the window in the house we are staying in and see the snow on top of the mountains about six miles away by the way the crow flies.

"We went through Salzburg and just out of town is where the Alps start. We went about 15 miles back up in the mountains. It was a very good road leading up to the fortress. The mountains are about 8,000 feet high. There are hundreds of bomb craters around and in the buildings. They sure had his (Hitler's) place pin pointed and really wrecked the building.

Winamac (IN) Republican 31 May 1945: 1&5.

"The last place we were in Germany I saw Hitler's and Goering's private cars. One was a Harch and the other a Mercedes, both were big black super-charged sedans.

"On yesterday's trip and the trip I took today, I saw thousands of German soldiers coming in to surrender. They were walking, riding bicycles, riding horses, riding in wagons and in their own trucks.

"All had white flags. (The new German flag, Ha.)

"They threw away their guns and helmets then get on the road and head for the Prisoner of War camps. Most of them go unguarded along the road but there are always G. I.'s going up and down the roads. The Germans seem to be glad that it is about all over.

"On our trip today we passed a German airport with over 100 planes that were knocked out on the ground.

"The scenery is beautiful up in the Alps. The pine trees look black from a distance then the sun shines on the snow and makes it glisten.

"Some of the boys got some of Hitler's wine today and seem to be enjoying it.

"It was nice and warm out today with the sun shining most of the day.

"This house is the first one we have been in that had electricity still working and we didn't have to hook up our generator to have juice for our lights and radio.

"Before I went through Germany I thought they would have up-to-date farm machinery, tractors, etc., but they are way behind the times. That is the reason they had so many slave laborers. They use milk cows and a few horses to do the farm work. The army took most of their horses.

The following letter was received by Mr. and Mrs. George F. Poor of the Winamac vicinity from their son, PFC Kenneth Poor.

April 14
Germany

Dear Dad and Mother:

I was surely surprised yesterday when I learned of President Roosevelt's death. It's really too bad he couldn't have lived to see the final outcome of this struggle for free civilization.

I am sending you an article I cut from the Stars & Stripes (about the Ohrdruf concentration camp). I want you to read it because I saw with my own eyes exactly what it tells. It was the most terrible sight I have ever witnessed. I will try and explain a little of what I saw.

This concentration camp has barracks similar to some we have in the States. For beds they had burlap cloth stretched over a thin layer of straw—one piled right up against the other for maximum capacity. The floors are bare ground and very damp. There were pots and pans scattered around.

In one street there were approximately fifteen or twenty bodies in a circle where they had fallen after being murdered. They all had bullet holes through their heads and almost all had more in their

Soldier Tells of Horror Camps

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE) includes stock, fixtures and building to them except skin and bones. They had been starved and beaten. Some had ragged clothes on and others were nude. They were all clean shaven, apparently from being lousy. I can't commence to explain just how they did look, exactly.

* In another shed there were bodies (some thirty or forty) piled up just as we would think of stacking cordwood. They were all lime covered to devour the bodies. I would say they ranged in age from sixteen to old men.

Back in the States when I used to read about such things as this I chalked it up as war propaganda, but never again, after seeing that sight, I still can't imagine how one human being could be so cruel to another. I, now, more than ever, have no sympathy whatever for a German.

It's really too bad some of the people in the States who don't have the slightest idea there is a war on, or what war is like, couldn't have seen that. I'll bet there would be no more strikes or slackening of the war effort.

I won't write any more about this, although I could go on and on. It's one sight I shall never forget as long as I live.

Six Winamac Men Get Together In Philippines

A get-together of six Winamac men stationed in the Philippines is described by Dick Dodd, news editor of The Democrat before he entered service, in a letter to the office force dated April 7. He wrote:

"No doubt you have heard from Sam Lebo, Russ Dilts or some of the other relatives back there about a half dozen of us from Winamac being together a few weeks ago. In addition to Dick, John and I, who have been here some time now, Stewart Lebo is now stationed here. Ray Degner, who is also in a regiment of the 2ESB, was in and out, but happened to be in the same week end that Jim Mays came over from a nearby island where he is stationed. That seems quite unusual—a half-dozen of us from a small town in Indiana meeting way out here. Doubt if anybody from New York, with all its millions, has seen at one time that many fellows whom he knew back there. And I'll bet

Six Winamac Men Get Together In Philippines

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE) that those of us who live in a small place actually know more people and have more friends than the average resident of a city.

Infantry Cleans Up.

"I wish you could see the change that has taken place in this vicinity since we came in last October. In comparison, it is hardly recognizable. Even the roads are an example. The one by our camp then was hardly passable, and now it is a stoned, two-lane highway with the many one-way bridges along it replaced with two-way ones. Equal to the great work the infantry does in cleaning out a place, is that of other units in cleaning it up and building it up.

"The tune of the natives has changed, too. A common expression used to be 'Give me a blanket,' as they came through the camp areas seeking food and clothing. Now they are in the souvenir business in a big way and asking such prices as $10 for a bolo knife or $5 for a pair of wooden shoes like the clogs worn on the beaches at home. Conversely a GI with a supply of sewing machine needles can clean up at the rate of $5 a package. Singer sewing machines are the one modern appliance to be found in many a humble, native shack.

G-I Civilization.

"Many families are 'modernizing' or rebuilding their homes from scrap lumber, metal sheeting and worn out canvas picked up from the beaches or abandoned camps. In place of the burlap-like clothes that were a common sight at first, the local inhabitants are wearing everything from regular GI to dresses made from vari-colored silk from discarded parachutes. The way some of the girls doll up is hardly comparable to the hovels most of them live in.

"Strangely enough, laundry prices have been held to the standard originally set by the government—30 centavos (15c) for a uniform. Even the most of us would pay three times as much not to have to do that chore. The way they do the job is something. The clothes are taken to a creek and hell beat out of 'em as they are laid on a board or rock and pounded with a paddle. They turn out a pretty good job though, and it is the exception when our clothes are not brought back clean and folded so neatly they don't even have wrinkles."

"Little Joe" Kirsch, formerly of Winamac, ought to feel all puffed up, because it isn't every soldier who gets his picture taken with a movie actress. When Patricia Morrison went to Fort Lewis, Wash., where Joe is stationed, to give an entertainment, Joe and probably a couple other thousand soldiers went to see her, of course. And Joe found himself up on the stage with Miss Morrison. Although at home he was a little shy around the girls, he seems not a whit em- barrased with Miss Morrison's arm around him.

He enlisted in the army a year and a half ago and is now a corporal in the medical corps at Fort Lewis. He and his brother Karl, living southwest of Winamac, were born in Germany, and came to this community in 1929. When Joe left for the army he could not write English. But now he sends typewritten letters home, bragging a little about the above picture. He says he thinks he'll go into the movies.

Sergeant Finds Parents, Sisters In Germany Are Well

The dream that Sgt. Joe Kirsch had cherished since Germany declared war on the United States came true at last. It was that he might be with the American Army invading Germany so that he could visit his aging parents in their home at the outskirts of Essen.

In a letter received this week by Karl Kirsch of Winamac, Sgt. Kirsch told of a thrilling visit to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reinhold Kirsch, on April 25, and a letter was enclosed from the mother, the first direct word from them since war was declared. He said he found the parents and two sisters there in good health and that their home had not felt the effects of the war.

For a long time it seemed doubtful if the former German boy, who enlisted in the United States Army to fight the Nazis, would reach his homeland. In the early days of the French invasion he suffered a broken leg and was confined to a hospital in England, and at one time thought he was going to be returned to the States. But instead he rejoined his company, although not for combat duty, and finally reached his hoped-for destination.

Sees Parents

Imagine yourself as a sergeant in a victorious invading army and meeting your parents, who had lived under the domination of Hitler, to find them well and unharmed.

That is what happened to Sgt. Joe Kirsch, known in Winamac as "Little Joe," according to a letter received this week by Karl Kirsch, a brother who resides near here.

Sgt. Kirsch was with the invading army which went into Essen, Germany. United State soldiers are under strict orders not to fraternize with the enemy. The sergeant received special permission to visit his parents, accompanied by an officer.

He found his parents, who are about 75 years old, well and their house unscratched by the terrific bombardments from land and air directed at the city.

It was the first time either of the brothers had had direct word from their parents since the war started. They have had only one message through the Red Cross during that time.

Winamac (IN) Republican 10 May 1945: 1.

Carl Kirsch, west of here, received a letter from his brother, Pfc. Joseph Kirsch, who was fighting with the U. S. army in Germany, that he has visited their parents who live near Essen, Germany. Joseph was fighting near there. He stated he spent three hours with them and they were well and their home was not hurt. The brothers came from Germany to make their home here, Carl, 19 years ago, and Joe, 15 years ago. They have lived west of here most of the time. Both have families.

Sees Folks In Germany

Here is Sgt. Joe Kirsch, formerly of the U. S. Army, who held a happy reunion near Essen, Germany, last summer with his parents. Sgt. Joe is shown with his arms around his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reinhold Kirsch, with other relatives surrounding them. Although the Kirsch farm is near Essen which was leveled by Allied attacks, the Kirsch home was untouched. Joe told how his father, when everyone else crouched in bomb shelters, walked up and down in front of his house and told friends that his place wouldn't be bombed because his son was in the American army. Another brother, Karl Kirsch, farmer and baker, lives near Winamac. Joe, after being released from the army is now working in New York.

Lt. Andrew Nufer Is Awarded DSC, Next to Highest Military Honor

LT. ANDREW NUFER JR.

First Lt. Andrew G. Nufer Jr. of Winamac has received the Army's second highest award, the Distinguished Service Cross. A son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew G. Nufer Sr. of Winamac, the officer won the medal in the action last January in which he was wounded. The presentation was made at ceremonies celebrating the first anniversary of the Normandy invasion.

An account of the presentation was published in "Timberwolf," the newspaper printed by Lt. Nufer's unit. It stated:

"On Wednesday, June 6, 1945—D-Day plus 365—one year after the first allied landings on the coast of Normandy, the German civilians of Hunfeld stood in the hot afternoon sun, shifting awkwardly, hat in hand, and watched the Stars and Stripes pass in review.

"The Germans know why we celebrate this day.

"Before the officers and men of the Second Battalion, First Lt. Andrew Nufer of Company F strode swiftly across the short-clipped grass field. Brig. Gen. Frank Camm, commandant of the 78th Division, pinned the nation's second highest military decoration—the Distinguished Service Cross—above the left pocket of the lieutenant's Eisenhower jacket.

"During the heated battle of Kesternich, Lt. Nufer showed the courageous action which brought him the DSC. When enemy fire pinned his company down, Lt. Nufer ran across open, fire-swept terrain to friendly tanks. Mounting the lead tank, he led them into action until his tank was struck by enemy fire and he was knocked to the ground. Mounting a second tank, he guided them until that tank was hit also and he was wounded by enemy artillery.

"Despite his wounds, he continued to lead the tanks in support of the infantry elements until his company objective was secured.

"The Second Battalion paraded, represented by crack marching units of Easy, Fox, George and Howe companies. They marched to the music of the 78th Division band—this time in rank and file, not open squad columns, for today there is peace in Europe. This day marked the invasion of the continent, the first step toward the destruction of the Reich.

"Yes, the Germans know why we celebrate this day."

Lt. Nufer was inducted into the Army in April, 1941. In December of 1942 he was accepted for officer's training, and received his commission at Ft. Benning, Ga., in February, 1943. He was sent overseas last fall and was wounded in action January 30. After being hospitalized in France and in England, Lt. Nufer had just returned to his outfit when the medal was awarded him.

Distinguished Service Cross

The Distinguished-Service Cross is awarded to persons who, while serving in any capacity with the Army of the United States, distinguished themselves by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy. This decoration was instituted by executive order in January, 1918, and confirmed by Congress July 9, 1918.

It is a cross of bronze with an eagle in the center and a scroll below the eagle bearing the inscription "For Valor." On the reverse is space for the recipient's name!

Andy Nufer Is Awarded DSC Medal

The Distinguished Service Cross, highest award for heroism given by the United States with exception of the Congressional Medal, was presented to Lt. Andrew Nufer, Jr., in Germany recently, according to a letter received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Nufer of near Winamac.

The citation which accompanied the award said, in part, "For extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy in Germany. When enemy fire pinned his company down and inflicted heavy casualties, First Lieutenant Nufer ran 150 yards across an open fire-swept terrain to friendly tanks.

"Mounting the lead tank, he led the vehicles into action until the tank on which he was riding was struck by enemy fire and he was knocked to the ground.

"Mounting a second tank he continued to guide them until the second tank was also struck and he was wounded by enemy artillery fire. Despite his wounds he continued to lead the tanks in support of the infantry until his company's objective was secured."

Lt. Nufer, who is 34 years old, entered military service on April 16, 1941. He had attended Oxford Institute and the Dayton School of Aviation. Well known throughout the county, he had been employed at the Kelly Hardware and is a graduate of the Winamac high school in 1929.

He is now stationed with an infantry unit in the 9th Army in Germany and becomes the first Pulaski county man to receive so high a military honor.

Sons Write from Two Sides of World

"We have no trouble finding shelter," writes Capt. Allen Dilts to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Dilts of Winamac, in speaking of advancements which the Third Army is making into German territory north of Metz. He explains that it is not unusual for the attacking American soldiers to find German residences entirely abandoned by their occupants, even to food in the pantry, thus making it easy for the invaders to find places to live.

A letter from another son, Lieut. John Dilts, reveals that he was a participant in the attack on Leyte, in the Philippines, and that the vessel on which he reached the island was hit by a Jap bomb. It struck in the midst of a shipment of oxygen gas tanks, which caused a hot fire, but damage to the ship was slight and the casualties few. He was stationed about eight miles inland on Leyte when he wrote.

On March 10, 1945, near Alf, Germany, Capt. Dilts fearlessly led a forward observation party across the heavily defended Moselle river to establish an artillery observation post. Winamac MP Has Job of Guarding Valuable Paintings

Since they read that the Army soaked a soldier nearly $250 for losing his jeep, two Second Service Command MP's are sweating out an assignment which charged them with responsibility for the safety of oil paintings valued by experts from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

"I'll be glad when somebody takes these paintings out of here so I can get some sleep nights," declared Cpl. Francis J. Roe of Winamac, who is in charge of the two-man detail guarding the paintings. His sidekick, Pvt. Harold E. Haas, just added a "Me too."

The paintings, which belong to the Army Medical Department, are being exhibited at Rockefeller Center's International Building. They were painted in European and Pacific combat areas by leading artists who were sent overseas as accredited correspondents by the War Department. They show Army doctors, nurses and enlisted corpsmen in action caring for the wounded on the battlefields and right behind the front lines.

Cpl. Roe, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Roe of Winamac, saw duty down in the Canal Zone, where MP work gets pretty rugged on Saturday nights. But he says that job was soft compared to this assignment. It didn't help him any when he learned that a leading art expert had valued the paintings as "somewhere around $1,000,000."

"They tell me that picture over there is worth twenty-five thousand bucks and that it took the artist nine months to paint it," Cpl. Roe said. "Now wouldn't I be in a fine fix if that one ever got away from me and the Army nickel me for twenty-five grand!"

Staffeldt Says He Probably Would Have Acquitted Ford

DETROIT (UPI) — The judge who presided over the Ford Pinto trial says he probably would have acquitted Ford Motor Co. of reckless homicide charges had the jury been unable to reach a verdict in the case.

Judge Harold R. Staffeldt told the Detroit Free Press he had the power to enter an acquittal since he deferred a decision on a Ford motion for acquittal before the case went to the Pulaski County jury Monday.

Staffeldt said Friday he could have ordered the No. 2 automaker acquitted even if the jury had returned a guilty verdict.

The jury deliberated for four days before finding Ford not guilty Thursday in the deaths of three young women killed in the fiery crash of their 1973 Pinto on an Indiana highway in 1978.

Deliberations in the case dragged on into the early hours Thursday, however, with jurors at one point saying they were hopelessly deadlocked. Attorneys in the case began to wonder whether a verdict would be forthcoming.

Four jurors favored conviction when the panel took its first vote Monday, the newspaper said.

"I thought the verdict the jury brought in was fair," Staffeldt said. "I don't quarrel with their decision."

The judge, however, said he believed prosecutors presented enough evidence so the jury could have decided the case either way.

Prosecutors argued Ford knew its 1973 Pintos were prone to explode in rear-end collisions but produced the subcompacts anyway, neither repairing the cars or warning the public.

The No. 2 automaker denied the allegations, saying the Pinto met all federal safety standards in effect at the time.

Highlights Of Trial

10 Weeks Of Courtroom Drama Results In Acquittal Of Ford

BY DAN LARSON
Staff Writer

WINAMAC — Ten weeks after the trial began, a Pulaski County jury acquitted the Ford Motor Company of recklessness Thursday for the design of the Pinto subcompact.

Marked by stormy courtroom sessions and Perry Mason-like sidebar witnesses, the unprecedented criminal trial of a corporation focused national attention on this small farming community.

The following is a synopsis of the background and a week-by-week summary of the historic Pinto trial:

The Background

A state law goes into effect July 1, 1978, which allows prosecutors to apply criminal statutes to corporations and individuals alike. Aug. 10, 1978, three teenage girls are killed near Goshen when their Pinto is rammed from behind by a van and explodes in flames from a ruptured fuel tank. The girls are Lyn Ulrich, 16, of Coopersburg, Pa., her sister, Judy, 18, the driver, and their cousin, Donna, 18, of Roselle, Ill. Within two months, an Elkhart County grand jury indicted Ford under the provisions of the new statute for reckless homicide in three counts, one for each of the girls. Another Elkhart grand jury, however, declined to indict Robert Dugger, Goshen police chief, on the two counts.

"Attorneys for Ford seek a change of venue from Elkhart County due to extensive publicity surrounding the deaths of the three girls. In January, 1979, Pulaski County is chosen as the site of the trial.

Initial criminal hearings are held before Pulaski Circuit Judge Harold Stafford and the subsequent tone of courtroom proceedings begins to take shape. Ford is represented by James Neal, a former Watergate prosecutor from Nashville, Tenn.; his attorneys, Audrey Harrell, Matilda Wheeler of the private New York firm of Hugh, Howard and Reed; and Winamac's Lester Wilson as local counsel.

Assisting Elkhart County Prosecutor Michael Cosentino are Terrance Kiely, a DePaul University law professor; Bruce Berner, a Vassaropolis University law professor; and Dennis Miller, a private attorney from Milwaukee.

At a late summer hearing, Judge Stafford denies a motion to dismiss the charges and, in October, he clamps a protective order on the case file, sealing it from the view of the press and public following publication of excerpts of the file in articles that are highly damaging to Ford in the Chicago newspapers. The file closure decision is later upheld by the Indiana Supreme Court.

The Trial Begins

First Week — After dismissing nearly all the jurors called for the trial, the attorneys agree on a panel of 12 women and three alternates. The jurors are: Roger R. Tanne, Edgar Adams, Mark A. Fecce, Barbara Asel, Raymond L. Schramm, James A. Yurgillas and Arthur Seltzer. The alternates are: Chris Dust, Herman and Michael Farnsworth.

Jury selection lasts the entire four days of the first week. Judge Stafford orders the trial recessed for the weekend every Thursday to allow routine court cases to be heard Friday.

With the start of the trial, members of the media descend on Winamac. Many residents are upset by their portrayal in Newsweek magazine as naive, country-folks, seeking to capitalize on the out-of-towners needing food and shelter.

Second Week — Opening arguments by Cosentino and Neal. The state claims Ford "carelessly" failed to "sacrifice human life for profit." While the defense claims the automaker is being falsely blamed for a tragic accident over which it had no control.

The first of the prosecutorial witnesses testifies. Trooper Nell B. Graves, who investigated the accident, said he found the Pinto fuel tank intact in the front passenger compartment where it ignited. Next to testify is Mrs. Matilde Ulrich, mother of Lyn and Judy. She said she did not receive a recall letter concerning her daughter's Pinto until February, 1979, in a recent legal move. Ford agreed that the girls had driven harshly, but the company argued, thereby blocking emotional testimony describing the condition of the girls when found. Eyewitnesses to the crash testify the Pinto was moving when hit by the van, supporting a key prosecution position.

Third Week — Authentication of Ford documents becomes key issue. The prosecution attempts to introduce into trial evidence letters from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) but the court rules letters, or any other documents, cannot ever be presented to the press under subpoena. "could have been signed by a janitor," Judge Stafford rules any document offered as evidence must be authenticated by whomever offers it. "This court must be careful lest it open the door to sets of frauds," he says.

Fourth Week — Testimony of independent auto safety consultant Byron Bloch stretches through the week. Using diagrams and charts, Bloch tells the jury the basic design of the Pinto is hazardous but under cross-examination, admits placing the blame for the fatal crash on Ford was not uncommon for 1973 model year. Neal accuses Bloch of having "an axe to grind" toward the automaker.

Fifth Week — Former Ford engineering executive Harry Clegg testifies all four days of this week. He claims the Pinto was safe when it went into production and Ford management rejected a plan to install an additional $6.60 in each Pinto during manufacture which would have improved the fuel tank's resistance to rupture on rear-end impact.

Judge Stafford says a surprised courtroom may have some misconception about a reversal error when he admitted several prosecution documents into evidence.

Sixth Week — The state rests its case, a Ford motion for directed verdict is denied and the defense's case starts off with a Ford motion for directed verdict. The defense's opening rests. Judge Stafford rules a prima facie case has been made against Ford in denying the motion for acquittal on the evidence.

An Elkhart General Hospital orderly is the first witness to testify. He claims to have talked to Judy Ulrich before she died the night of the fatal crash. Judy told him she stopped the Pinto on the highway to pick up a gas cap which had fallen from it, supporting Ford's contention the Pinto was stopped when struck at more than 50 mph. No automobile made in 1973 could withstand such a collision and no leak from the defense side.

Seventh Week — The father of the Pinto testifies and the jury is allowed to see documents relating to a prior conviction of the automaker. Harold MacDonald, a corporate vice-president, was convicted in 1970 of more than $31,000 worth of Ford parts that had not made it into the car prior to production and the location of the fuel tank was not as dangerous as claimed.

On Thursday, Judge Stafford rates the jury case see documents relating to the Pinto on conviction on 200 counts of tampering of air pollution controls in 1972. The convictions related to the corporations credibility in the past, Stafford said.

Eighth Week — Crash test films made by Ford are shown to the jury. John T. Hough, an uninvited reconstruction specialist who directed the films, testifies he determined the closing speed of the crash to have been 50 mph from the amount of damage done to the Pinto.

Ninth Week — The defense closes its case with the testimony of a second person who claimed to have talked to Judy Ulrich. She claims she had stopped the Pinto when it was struck by the van.

Tenth Week — Closing arguments, final instructions, deliberations and a 10-day verdict. Ford sides presented its case for the first six days and the jury then instructed the jurors that to convict, they must find Ford had failed to warn of danger in the Pinto's fuel system.

After 2½ hours of deliberation Monday, the jurors are sent home for the night. They reconvene Tuesday morning and after a day and a half of deliberation reach a decision. By Wednesday night, the jury tells Judge Stafford they are deadlocked but he urges them to continue deliberations. At 11 a.m. Thursday, they have reached an unanimous decision — not guilty — thereby ending the nation's first trial of a corporation for criminal recklessness in the design of a product.

Pinto Verdict Reaction Mixed

WINAMAC — Reaction to the Pinto trial verdict was widespread Thursday.

While Ford Motor Co. officials cheered a conviction in the Pinto case in Detroit, in Washington D.C., consumer advocate Ralph Nader claimed the publicity generated by the 10-week trial will benefit the consumer.

Nader said the case will have far-reaching effects. One effect is that Americans not only about the dangers of the Pinto but about the need to prosecute corporations for criminal behavior.

Despite losing the long court battle, Elkhart County Prosecutor Michael Cosentino said the result could be safer fuel systems and fewer automobile fire deaths in the coming years.

Cosentino said he accepted the auto had been "unfairly maligned."

However, he noted the trial and the attention it focused on the corporate decision making process means there must be responsibility on the part of corporations that make the country may some day be benefited by a jury's decision.

But during a meeting of Ford corporate officials to spank the government and the auto industry in finding ways to insure the integrity of vehicle fuel systems in crashes.

John G. Caldwell, who was appointed to succeed Ford as chairman of the nation's second largest automaker, said the verdict was a vindication of the company and of the subcompact Pinto. He added the auto had been "unfairly maligned."

He added he believes the trial sent a message to corporations that "make in the United States" and the country may some day be benefited by a jury's decision.

The Pinto controversy also spanned into the auto industry in finding ways to insure the integrity of vehicle fuel systems in crashes.

Consumer safety standards are under investigation by the government, while the industry has experimented with such devices as fuel tank bladders and plastic tanks to reduce the likelihood of fire.

Others were not so happy with the jury's decision.

"I very much disliked the verdict," said Earl Ulrich of Osseda, the father of Judy and Lyn. He was upset that the prosecution was barred from presenting all of the evidence it wanted to present.

"They couldn't get their story told. They couldn't get their evidence in."

Byron Bloch, an auto safety consultant who testified during the Pinto trial, said the state was barely able to show the jury less than 10 percent of the evidence it had against Ford.

Life In Winamac Will Change Again; Hordes Of Reporters, Lawyers Depart

WINAMAC, Ind. (UPI) — The Pinto trial is a dead issue in the town it dominated for 10 weeks. The new issue is that old Hoosier perennial, basketball.

"No one's talking about the trial today. Everyone's talking about how we're going to do in basketball," said Mike Miller, editor of the weekly Pulaski County Journal. Purdue beat Indiana 76-69 Thursday night in an NCAA Mideast Regional semifinal game at Lexington, Ky.

A jury of seven men and five women Thursday noon found the Ford Motor Co. innocent of reckless homicide in the deaths of three girls whose 1973 Pinto exploded in a rear-end collision.

Scores of lawyers and reporters promptly hurried down streets and highways and raced for the nearest airport.

A handful of reporters stayed long enough to have breakfast Friday at Matilda's Cafe across the street from the Pulaski County Courthouse. Then they, too, departed, leaving bailiff Mike Gorigan "sort of lonely."

Judge Harold Stafford was back in Pulaski Circuit Court, hearing a local inheritance lawsuit. Where once there were hundreds of people jammed into the room, Friday the only occupants were the judge, the court reporter, and two lawyers.

"It seems as if the jurors didn't think Ford proved their case, but they didn't sufficiently prove their case either," said Dan Taskersley, a local attorney who served as a deputy prosecutor.

Taskersley said the Indiana Legislature needs to come up with guidelines for trying corporations in criminal cases. The first was the nation's first trial of an automaker on criminal rather than civil charges in a car-related death.

"It's going to be very different around here. We'll have a lot of empty space upstairs," Miller said. The new news is that Ford has moved its headquarters from the old wood frame building to big city reporter.

"It's like having company. It makes you sad when they go," said Sue Glasson, a Sterling Drug employee who typified the friendliness Winamac folks showed to their visitors.

A woman reporter dashed in during jury deliberations, begging for a needle and thread to repair a split seam in her trouser leg. "I'll do that, honey," Mrs. Glasson said, and promptly repaired the small tear.

Judge Reflects On Pinto Trial

BY DAN LARSON

WYANDOTTE — The courtroom was empty this week.

The historic trial of the Ford Motor Company on criminal recklessness charges for the design of the Pinto has ended and things had turned quiet last week.

The emptiness of the courtroom made it appear almost empty during the days of testimony during the Ford Pinto trial when it was crammed to nearly overflowing with attorneys, legal assistants, reporters, sketch artists, spectators and exhibits, which included a full-size mock-up, poster-size charts, photographs and movie equipment.

On March 10, the day when final arguments were made to the jury, the courtroom, which has a seating capacity of 187, had 200 spectator seats, was packed with an estimated 100 persons. But now everything is quiet and the seating gallery is empty.

And what was true for the courtroom holds for the courthouse itself.

Out in the lobby the team of television cameramen and audio technicians that would block the main courthouse lobby for hours waiting for the attorneys in the case to make a brief statement.

Also gone are the temporary telephone facilities on the courthouse lawn used in filing news reports in faraway cities and the full-size mock-ups of the four other 1972 subcompact autos Ford had moved into the basement as a companion to the Pinto.

Does Pulaski Circuit Judge Harold Staffeldt, who presided over the 10-week legal battle, miss all the attention and the publicity and even the notoriety the trial generated?

"Not at all. I don't crave that type of thing," he said. "I can do without it."

Got Off To Bad Start

Staffeldt said he may have gotten off to a bad start in the Pinto trial because he was both unprepared and unprepared.

Judge Staffeldt, who drew criticism for some of his rulings and for his courtroom manner during the trial, said his dentist told him near the end of January the tooth, a lower left molar, was badly abscessed and would require immediate extraction.

But for the first three weeks of the trial, Staffeldt could feel the infected tooth "spreading the poison throughout my system," he said.

With the pain from the infected tooth bothering him, he may have allowed some of his rulings to sound as if he was being ineffective when he was actually only distracted by the tooth.

Toothache or not, Staffeldt said he is not the type of judge to run his court with an iron hand. He added that he "may not have been as firm as I should have," with the attorneys in the case but "I just can't sleep."

Overall, Judge Staffeldt said he has no regrets about the decisions he made during the historic trial, in which a seven-man, five-woman jury acquitted Ford Motors of recklessly designing the 1972 Pinto.

The case from the 1972 accident, Aug. 10, 1972 in which three teen girls died when their Pinto was struck from behind and exploded in flames.

However, while there was evidence presented by the state which could have justified a conviction, Staffeldt said he agreed with the defense's guilty verdict, reached March 13 after 25 hours of deliberation.

Judge Reflects On Pinto Case...

Calls Coverage Fair

Despite many unfavorable accounts of him and his trial rulings that appeared in newspapers and on television across the country, Staffeld said he is not critical of the press.

He said the coverage of the trial was for the most part fair and the only thing that upset him was when he was misquoted in news stories.

Staffeld noted he received what he referred to as "hatemail" from several trial-watchers, all of which was mailed from out-of-the-area locations, following an article in a northern Indiana paper.

The newspaper article misquoted a courtroom remark to defense attorney James Neal, Staffeld said, and as a result he received several of the critical letters, he added.

When asked about the issues raised in the Pinto case, Staffeld said the timing of the trial itself may have been premature because Indiana law is not clear on the nature of criminal prosecution of a corporation.

Speaking for himself, Staffeld said cases such as the Pinto trial should be kept "on the civil side of the docket," rather than heard as criminal trials.

Indiana law allows a jury to award punitive damages to an injured party for defective products in a civil product liability case, "but if we want to prosecute them (manufacturers) criminally, we're going to have to redefine our terms," he said.

Although remaining cautious when answering questions about the trial itself due to the possibility of a prosecution appeal on points of law, Staffeld did comment on some aspects as he saw them.

Limited By Indictment

The indictment handed down by the Elkhart County grand jury in late 1978 was badly written from the state's side, Staffeld said, because it was generally unclear and it specified one particular car of the several million Pintos made.

Because of the limited nature of the indictment, Staffeld said he was forced to limit evidence introduced by the Prosecutor Michael Cosentino to the 1973 Pinto model. If the charges had stated the Ulrich Pinto was only one of the several million Pintos made between 1971-76, it would have allowed him to expand the scope of the trial, the judge said.

He added he was forced to block the prosecution from showing crash test films it had acquired for two main reasons. First, the state did not produce a witness to the crash tests who could have testified as to how the films were made and second, the state did not show the tests were conducted with the specific intention of studying fuel system integrity.

Pharos-Tribune

Pulaski Courthouse Activity Slows Down

Ford's accident reconstruction specialist, John Haberstad, testified to both of those points. Staffeld noted, and because the films showed a scientific study of one of the major issues of the trial, namely the damage done to the fuel tanks of several model of autos, the Ford-produced crash test films were shown to the jury.

State Lacked Expert

The judge said he was concerned at the time the state rested its case that it had not produced its own accident reconstruction specialist. A statistical expert would have been allowed to testify in rebuttal, the judge said, but Cosentino chose not to have the man take the stand.

Cosentino said he did not want to confuse the jury with statistical arguments at the end of the trial but Staffeld speculated the expert's testimony might have been unfavorable to the state's case.

"What it got down to was the cause of the accident," the judge said. "The testimony of (Nancy) Fogo (Levi) Woodard and Haberstad showed the cause of the accident was the crush of the van and not the design of the Pinto."

Fogo and Woodard both testified they had talked with the driver of the Pinto following the accident and were told it had been stopped when it was struck from behind by the van. Haberstad said that according to the amount of damage done to the Pinto, the closing speed of the two vehicles was greater than 50 mph.

Pharos-Tribune

Reporters Crowd Steps During Trial Coverage

Ford had maintained throughout the trial no auto made in this country, including full-size vehicles, could have withstood such an impact and not leaked fuel.

When asked about two occasions when he ruled against Ford, including the admission of the initial government notification of Ford of a possible defect in 1971-76 Pintos and the conviction papers concerning Ford's violation of the federal Clean Air act, Staffeld said since Ford was acquitted; those points most likely would not be appealed.

During the trial, Staffeld commented he may have been setting legal precedent by allowing as evidence in a criminal trial records relating to a defendants prior convictions.

Admitting the conviction papers into evidence went to the issue of Ford's credibility in the past, Staffeld said, but the jury evidently did not put much weight behind the document.

The judge also criticized Cosentino's failure to follow up the more than 30 subpoenas he was seeking to serve on high-ranking Ford officials in Michigan.

"It may have been a mistake for him (Cosentino) not to go up there in person," Staffeld said of the Wayne County, Mich., subpoena hearing. Also when he was turned down the first time, Cosentino could have attempted to have the subpoenas re-issued, possibly with more success, Staffeld said.

Winamac Soldier Travels from India to Burma

Moving with the first American troops into Rangoon, Cpl. Charles Garling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Garling of Winamac, is a member of a 10th Air Force anti-aircraft gun crew. This unit recently completed a 750-mile, 186-day trek from Assam, India, to the tip of Burma. The gun crew protected vital air supply routes used by the advancing British 14th Army.

The men of the anti-aircraft battery began their long journey to Rangoon by being towed in fourteen glider sorties from a base at Assam to Yazagya, Burma. It was the first glider movement of an anti-aircraft battery in the India-Burma theater and it was successful despite the fact that Jap bombers were blasting an airstrip within sight of the rice paddy where the gliders landed.

As the Allies advanced, the unit moved up, and at Sinthe, Burma, took up double duties—performing an antiaircraft role by day and turning infantrymen by night to fight off Jap attacks. It was at Meiktila, an important supply and communications center, that the battery saw the most action.

Under fire for eleven straight days, the detachment earned the reluctant praise of Tokyo Rose, who broadcast: "Nipponese troops were unable to retake Meiktila because of strong American forces approximating a division." The only "American forces" there, it can now be revealed, was the tiny detachment of anti-aircraft gunners, numbering less than a hundred men.

While protecting an airstrip in central Burma, they encountered sixty American prisoners of war who had walked sixty-seven miles from their stockade in Rangoon. They were fed, housed and clothed by the first Americans they had seen in more than two years.

As a climax, the battle-weary unit was among the first troops to enter historic Rangoon. (Special to The Democrat from Headquarters, 10th Air Force.)

County Men Are Members of Hard Fighting Division

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Pugh received a letter this week from their son, T/Sgt. Arthur Pugh, in which he enclosed a copy of the war record of the Fourth Armored Division, including T/Sgt. Pugh, Lt. Albin F. Shank, S/Sgt. Ralph Miller, T/5 Ernest Clouser and S/Sgt. Philip Brucker. The last two named have suffered wounds and Sgt. Brucker is now in the hospital at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

The War Department disclosed that the Fourth Division spearheaded the 3rd Army advance across France. After landing in Normandy on D-Day, it went on to cut off Brittany peninsula and was identified with the hardest fighting in the liberation of France.

Lt. Strasser entered service in February of 1941 and was placed in the signal corps. He was with some of the first U. S. troops to go overseas, serving in the African and Italian campaigns. He has two brothers in service, Richard in the Navy and Wayne in the Army.

Lt. Shank also entered the Army before the U. S. was in the war, in May 1941, and was sent overseas nearly a year ago. A graduate of the Pulaski high school, he is with a mechanized cavalry squadron and recently received the Bronze Star. A brother, Carl, is now home on furlough after nearly two years in foreign service, and another brother, John, was reported missing after the fall of the Philippines.

The division was credited with smashing 400 enemy tanks, 140 large artillery pieces, 1500 miscellaneous vehicles, and taking 15,000 prisoners, all at relatively low cost to itself. It destroyed the Nazi 77th, 91st, 243rd infantry divisions, the 6th paratroop division and the 281st cavalry battalion. The Germans regarded the men of the Fourth Armored as "Supermen."

The reaction of a German Colonel of shock troops is typical. The Nazi officer, captured by the Fourth, said, "Having been a commander of army units in Russia, I must admit that the American troops are not only equipped with the best material, but what strikes me especially is the excellance of organization under which these men now function. I would be pleased to know the commander of this division."

The Germans described the Fourth as the American Elite Fourth Armored Division and Fourth Panzer, and called the men "ruthless fighters. The unit, commanded by Maj. Gen. John S. Wood, served as part of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army.

Officer Tells Of Capturing 123 Germans

Barney Shank of Pulaski received an interesting letter Monday from his son, Lt. Albin Shank, parts of which follow. Lt. Shank is with Gen. Patton's Third Army tanks.

Mar. 23
Germany
Dear Dad:

Would liked to have written sooner, but I was just too busy. Suppose you have noticed what we have been doing lately. Well, Dad, I have got my share of those guys. A captain and myself went into a town one day and walked right down the main street like we owned the joint. On the way out, we had 123 prisoners and only one shot fired. I had to fire that one to convince six Krauts to get out of a house. It's a good thing they moved then or they wouldn't have been able to walk. That isn't a bad haul for two men.

One place it was kind of funny. I walked into this house and there sat six Krauts at a table, just getting ready to eat dinner. When I poked my gun in their faces, one jumped up and hollered "Kamerad." The others just sat there with their mouths open. I motioned for them to get out of the house. They wanted to stay and eat. I stomped and yelled and motioned for them to get out. Then the pay off came. One guy had the guts enough to ask me to sit down and eat with them. Boy, there is where I got mad. I fired a shot right under the table and through the floor and boy, those Krauts really got out of there, where they joined the captain. I searched the room for guns and found six pistols and one rifle. They didn't have a chance to use them, though.

Well, Dad, I don't think this war will last long now. It really looks good to me. I could tell you some news, but censorship forbids. Anyhow, you will get it over the radio before this letter gets to you. Whatever you have read about my division and heard over the radio is true, because I've been right there. It was pretty rough at times, but that's war.

Hope this finds you all well and happy.

In a letter to his parents this week, M-Sgt. Farney described the arrival of the Japanese and also the island of Ie Shima. He stated that censorship had been lifted some, and he was able to tell more now. The letter said in part:

"History has been made here, with me as a witness. The Jap big shots landed here on their way to Manila. After leaving Japan they were met by a whole flock of P-38s and escorted here. They were in two planes, painted white with a big black cross on each side of the tail, and they were taken to Manila in a C-54 transport. We had our planes parked all around close to the Jap dispersal area.

"They came back today and were supposed to go back to Japan this evening. I couldn't miss chow so I left. As a reminder that we still had airplanes, the sky was full of planes all day long. It should have left quite an impression with the little "Rats." Of course, maybe those few atomic bombs left the biggest impression.

Battalion Executive Officer of the 593d Field Artillery Battalion, Maj. Barney A. Tucker, is the possessor of the Bronze Star Medal, an official commendation, and two combat stars, for action against the enemy at Bougainville, British Solomons Islands, and on New Guinea. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Tucker of Greenville, Tenn., and his wife is the former Miss Keplar of Winamac.

Maj. Tucker received the Bronze Star Medal for outstanding action with the infantry during the Bougainville campaign, more than a year ago. The citation reads in part, "Maj. Tucker, (then captain) acting as an artillery observer and liaison officer for an artillery battalion, displayed unusual leadership and courage when, during an attack on Hill 500, troops in the vicinity of the observation post were pinned down by enemy machine gun and rifle fire. Maj. Tucker stood up amidst the firing, exposing himself to enemy fire, rallied the troops by exhorting them to greater effort resulting in the resumption of the attack and taking of the objective. His historic and courageous action assisted materially in the successful assault and occupation of the objective. As the attack proceeded, Maj. Tucker resumed his duty as artillery observer, planned and plotted artillery concentrations at strategic points of enemy approach for the protection of our troops, and newly won positions."

Wife Lives in Winamac.

Maj. Tucker was inducted as a private in July, 1941, at Fort Thomas, Ky., and received his basic training at Fort Bragg, N. C. Soon after completion of basic training, he was selected to attend the field artillery officers' candidate school at Fort Sill, Okla., where he was commissioned as second lieutenant in April, 1942. Immediately after graduation he joined the newly organized 93d Infantry Division at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Winamac Lad Steers U.S. Battleship Into Tokyo Bay

When the U.S.S. North Carolina steamed into Tokyo bay with the American fleet, Franklin Paulsen, Q.M. 2/c, of Winamac was at the helm, he informed his mother, Mrs. Amelia Paulsen of Winamac, in a letter she received Tuesday.

In relating the experience, which occurred September 5, he said: "I certainly am tired tonight but quite happy for the fact that we are riding at anchor once more. For sixty-nine days we rampaged up and down the coast of Japan through storms and what not, and now we've finally dropped the hook—in Tokyo bay. One thing I can say, I was the first man on this ship to steer it into Tokyo bay.

"It took about three and a half hours to come up the channel and with tricky current I had to put up with I was pretty well worn out by the time we anchored. We don't intend to stay long though, as I think we're leaving tomorrow for Okinawa and from there to Pearl Harbor and the States."

The young Naval man, who will not reach his majority until next December 15, was an honor student in the 1942 graduating class of the Winamac high school and was prominent in high school athletics, starring on the basketball team. He was inducted into the Navy in March, 1942, and entered service at the close of school.

Lt. Robert D. Kinney, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Kinney of Winamac, serving on the USS Pickaway, an attack transport, is still technically at war with Germany and Japan. He had no V-E day and no V-J day.

Last May when Germany surrendered, the Pickaway was west-bound in mid-Pacific. On May 8 she was crossing the international dateline, and V-E day was skipped. That seemed noteworthy to the men on the transport. But on the day the Japs signed in Tokyo Bay, the Pickaway again was crossing the international dateline and V-J day was missed.

This story of scrambled holidays is an old one for these men. In the course of 50,000 miles of Pacific travel this year, they missed not only V-E and V-J day, but the Fourth of July as well, and enjoyed two Easters. They are dubiously looking toward Thanksgiving and Christmas. (Special to The Democrat from Fleet Home Town News Center.)

While preparing breakfast last Thursday morning, Mrs. John Rausch of Franklin township called to her son Ed to ask if he wanted a lunch to take with him to another farm which he works, or whether he would be home for dinner.

"I'll be home for dinner," replied a voice from the next room. The voice was not Ed's. The mother opened the door to see who had answered.

There, comfortably in bed, lay her son, S/Sgt. Wilbert Rausch, unexpectedly at home on furlough after having completed over fifty missions as a gunner on a bomber in the European theater. He had not told the folks he was coming. Instead he hitched-hiked a night ride up state road 35 and walked two miles to the family home. There, without disturbing mother or brothers Ed, Dan or George, he quietly went to bed in the spare room.

Sergeant in Army 26 Years Re-Enlists at 63

M/Sgt. John R. Layman, while visiting a few days ago in the home of his sister, Mrs. Aletha Bramble of Beaver township, announced that he planned to re-enlist in the Army, in which he has served for twenty-six years and from which he recently received a discharge.

Although sixty-three years of age, he stated that he is still eligible for re-enlistment and believes he can retain his master sergeant's rank. By completing thirty years' service he will be entitled to retirement on a pension of $155 per month.

Mr. Layman grew to manhood near the south line of Pulaski county, in the family home north of Buffalo. After spending a few years in the railway mail service he took up Army life, serving overseas in both World wars. He was in Hawaii when the Japs attacked Pearl Harbor. During his long service he has received numerous awards, including the Silver star, which he won for gallantry in 1918.

A younger brother, Joseph, is in the Marines.

Vet, 63, Eyes Pension And Tries Again

Master Sgt. John R. Layman put Winamac on newspaper pages throughout the country last week when he reenlisted in the army on his 63rd birthday.

Reporting his residence in Winamac (he has several relatives in the county) Sgt. Layman said he had his eye on a $155 a month pension and retirement to "a couple of acres down in Indiana."

His latest enlistment is for three years but he said he hoped to stay in the service four years and thus complete a 30-year record which would qualify him for the pension of $155 a month.

His long service record entitled him to re-enlistment despite his age and he will retain his master sergeant's rank.

"I'm in tip-top physical shape, I have $10,000 worth of bonds and I have my eye on a couple of acres down in Indiana," Layman said. "With my pension I'll be doing all right."

He received an honorable discharge last July and recently visited his sister, Mrs. Aletha Bramble, in Winamac. He served overseas in both World Wars and was in Hawaii when the Japs attacked Pearl Harbor. He wears campaign ribbons of many hues and the silver star for gallantry in 1918.

Layman said he had never married—"at least not yet." He recently published a volume of poetry dealing with his memories of the service.

JAPAN OUSTS WAR CRIMINAL

Ogata Removed From Cabinet

Propaganda Minister Named By General MacArthur for War Guilt Punishment Loses His Post; Japanese Imperial General Headquarters Dissolved; Tojo Appears on Road to Recovery From Self-Inflicted Bullet Wound.

TOKYO, Sept. 13—(UP)—Japan ousted Taketora Ogata, first and so far the only member of the present cabinet to be named a war criminal, as propaganda minister today and formally dissolved imperial general headquarters.

The action came less than 24 hours after Gen. Douglas MacArthur listed Ogata as one of seven leaders of the notorious, militaristic Black Dragon society wanted for trial. Japanese sources said two other leaders listed were dead.

The Japanese announcement indicated that Ogata was retaining for the present his concurrent post as chief secretary of the cabinet. Japanese sources earlier denied that Ogata ever had been connected with the Black Dragon society.

Named to succeed him as propaganda minister — also known as president of the information board — was Tatsuo Kawai, a career diplomat who was minister to Australia at the outbreak of the war. The Japanese obviously hoped he would be more acceptable to the Allies than Ogata.

Kawai was sworn into office at the imperial palace at 4 p. m. (2 a. m. CWT).

Other developments included:

Other developments included:

Japs Call on MacArthur

1.—Japanese Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu called on MacArthur at 3 p. m., perhaps to notify him of Kawai's appointment. Prince Fumimaro Konoye, former premier, also called on MacArthur this afternoon. The subject of the conference was not revealed. Konoye was the first member of the royal family to see MacArthur since Japan's surrender.

2.—Former Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo, Japan's No. 1 war criminal, appeared well on the road to recovery from his botched suicide attempt Tuesday. He no longer pleaded with doctors to let him die and his condition was described as "very satisfactory."

3.—American military police halted their roundup of war criminals named by MacArthur and granted a Japanese request for permission to deliver men in "good health."

4.—Shigenori Togo, Tojo's foreign minister at the time of Pearl Harbor and No. 2 on the list of 47 war criminals, was revealed to have gone to the northern Honshu resort of Kulzara because of "poor health."

5.—Lt. Gen. Shigemori Kuroda, Japanese commander in the Philippines in 1942-44 and No. 13 on the list, told a United Press correspondent he did not know why he was accused of war crimes, but was ready to surrender.

6.—Radio Tokyo said MacArthur gave permission for Japanese airways to resume service on four lines Friday to expedite the Allied occupation of Japan.

Dismiss Military Students

7.—The Japanese government notified MacArthur that all 17,000 students at naval colleges and attendance schools, now on summer vacation, had been dismissed.

The official Japanese Domei agency said imperial general headquarter—the brain trust in Japan's prosecution of the Pacific war — was abolished formally as of noon today (10 p. m. Tuesday, CWT) in accordance with MacArthur's orders.

At 2 p. m., Domei said, Gen. Yoshijiro Umezu, chief of the army general staff; Admiral Soemu Toyoda, chief of the navy general staff; Gen. Sadamu Shimomura, war minister, and Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, navy minister, proceeded to the imperial palace and reported to Hirohito on the abolition of imperial headquarters.

Japs Round up Accused

Umezu an hour later, Domei said, announced demobilization of staff members and simultaneously sent instructions to this effect to various units throughout Japan as well as in overseas areas.

The decision to permit Japanese police to round up the remainder of the wanted Japanese war criminals was announced by the Eighth army. The Japanese will be given a few days to complete the arrests before American officers take further action.

Filipinos on the war criminal list, however, probably will be taken into custody by the Americans at Naha within a day or two. The Filipinos include Jose P. Laurel, who headed the Japanese puppet government at Manila.

The only two Japanese so far in custody were Tojo and Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, navy minister.

Konoye Says Japan Must Admit Error

Declares First Objective of Government Is to Convince Countrymen They Made a Mistake

TOKYO, Sept. 13—(UP)—Prince Fumimaro Konoye said today that the government's first responsibility is to convince every Japanese of their country's error in warraking and that the way back will be long and hard.

Konoye, three times premier and now minister without portfolio—the equivalent of vice premier, admitted in an interview that many Japanese were not convinced of Japan's guilt in taking the road to war.

Now the defeated country faces a long era of poverty in which it must prove by deeds that it has reformed and is fit to be a member of the world family of nations, Konoye said.

He emphasized that the people of Japan must accept the blame, and foresaw hard times in the future.

He said the rice supply was short by almost 50,000,000 bushels, or about one-eighth, of the amount considered necessary to feed the country.

Political and governmental reorganization will be along the Democratic lines" required by the Potsdam declaration, Konoye said, adding:

"We are determined to establish democracy."

He said it would be somewhat on the British pattern, with the royal family and premier, "but it will be based on the principles of democracy."

He pointed out that the elimination of the duality in the government, enabling the military to take independent action, will ease the problem of governmental reorganization.

Konoye estimated that in the forthcoming elections about one-half of the members of the present diet—in office four years and acting as a rubber stamp in approving the wartime government's demands—will be returned to office.

U. S. ORDERS ARREST OF PRINCE KONOYE

TOKYO, Dec. 6—(UP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters today ordered the arrest of Prince Fumimaro Konoye, Marquis Kofuchi Kido and seven other high-ranking Japanese in the second sweeping round-up of government officials, diplomats, militarist and industrialists in the past four days.

Konoye, known as one of the youngest of Japan's "elder statesmen," was three times premier and a well-known figure in the international scene.

Publication of the latest arrest order brought to 286 the number of war criminal suspects specifically charged with crimes connected with the war.

Others whose apprehension by the Japanese government was ordered included:

Lt. Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, former ambassador to Germany.

Vice Adm. Takuji Godo, former commerce and industry minister.

Takechiro Sama, former minister to Spain and former consul general at Shanghai.

Shigeo Odate, former chief of military administration at Singapore.

Viscount Masatoshi Okochi, former president of the chemical industry combine.

Count Tadomasa Sakai, a leading member of the house of peers.

Konoye's Death Changes Arrest System In Japan

Americans May Take Suspects At Once Without Warning Due To Suicide's Escape Of Trial.

TOKYO—(UP)—General Douglas MacArthur may change the whole system of rounding up Japanese war crimes defendants as the result of Prince Fumimaro Konoye's suicide a few hours before he was due to surrender, it was understood Sunday.

Upset because another suspect—the most prominent in the country in point of rank—had slipped through the net by taking his own life, army authorities are considering whether to arrest defendants at once instead of giving them a period of grace in which to arrange their affairs.

Named Dec. 6

Konoye was named as a war criminal Dec. 6, and was to have reported at Sugamo prison Sunday to await trial.

It was learned that Konoye, before he "poisoned himself in the early hours of Sunday morning, dictated a farewell statement to his second son, Michitake, saying that he had made many mistakes as premier and felt a great responsibility to the nation. But he insisted that he worked for Japanese-American friendship and asserted:

"The though I must be treated as a war criminal is unbearable."

It was most regrettable, Konoye said, that the United States had named him as a war criminal.

Quoted Wilde

"The time undoubtedly will come," he continued, "when all wild rumors and public opinion based on the excitement of war, violent passions, excess self-conceit, servility between victor and vanquished and international slander will calm down...when that time comes, and only then, will a just decision be handed down by Providence."

Logansport (IN) Pharos-Tribune 17 Dec 1945: 1.

Army investigators learned that in the days before his suicide, Konoye had read Oscar Wilde's tragic De Profundis and had underlined in red pencil such quotations as:

"Society as we have constituted it will have no place for me...I must say I ruined myself and no person great or small can be ruined except by his own hand...I ended in horrible disgrace. There is only one thing for me—absolute humility...terrible as was the world did to me what I did to myself was far more terrible still."

Approaches Russians

Usually well informed sources said that shortly before the Potsdam conference Konoye as an adviser of the emperor tried to patch up friendship with Russia, and is part of that to induce Premier Josef Stalin to get the allies to tone down their unconditional surrender terms. Numerous overtures were made, it was said, but Russia delayed answering and at Potsdam the final phase of the war was agreed on.

In addition to dictating his statement, Konoye had a long talk with his son in which he told of his work as premier to prevent war.

Konoye Based His Hopes On Russian Pact

Royal Suicide's Papers Are Seized By American Authorities, Reveal Ex-Premier's Policies.

TOKYO — (UP) — Tomohiko Ushiba, secretary of former Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye, asserted Monday that Konoye's private papers showed that the Prince, at the time Japan signed the tripartite pact with Germany and Italy, believed the Soviet Union would align herself with the Axis powers later.

American counter-intelligence officers seized the papers shortly after Konoye was found dead by his own hand Sunday and turned them over to Joseph B. Kennan, chief allied prosecutor in the forthcoming war crimes trials. Ushiba described their principal points to the United Press.

According to his version, the documents asserted that Japan's foremost objective in joining the Axis in September 27, 1940, was to settle the war with China. Konoye, premier at the time was represented as feeling that Japan could settle the China affair in any way she wanted if she were allied with Germany, Italy and Russia against an "Anglo-American" combination.

Konoye's papers also represented him as thinking that aligning Japan with the Axis would forestall a spread of the war, because the power of the Axis forces would help the United States from entering the conflict.

Then his mind began to change, and Ushiba said that the papers showed Konoye felt that Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop of Nazi Germany had "lured" Japan into joining up.

Konoye's papers, Ushiba said, alleged that he felt the Axis had lost its meaning for Japan and that Tokyo had a right to abrogate it if the government saw fit, although Japan refrained from doing so. According to Konoye's version, Japan would have felt herself guilty of a breach of "international faith" had she broken the treaty.

The documents represent Konoye as then turning to the idea of a Japanese "understanding" with the United States. He believed this would make the tripartite alliance invalid so far as its effects on Japan were concerned.

Tell Me About My Boy Profile – Ike Haselby

PICTURE OF THE WEEK ➔

Prince Fumimara Konoye, Japan's ex-premier, gave a party the night before he was to surrender as a war criminal. He chatted pleasantly with his guests and then, after they were gone, poisoned himself. Before the Americans entered his room and modeled to take away his body, they took off their shoes. Just before he died Konoye had written his memoirs, in which he absolved himself of war guilt and placed the blame on the militarists. He claimed that if an interview with President Roosevelt could have been arranged the war would have been averted.

Lt. Ivan Haselby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Firman Haselby of the Star City vicinity, was shown in the page-size "Picture of the Week" in the January 7 issue of Life magazine beside the lifeless body of Prince Konoye, former premier of Japan.

The photograph was captioned, "In stocking feet a U. S. lieutenant kneels by deathbed of suicide Prince Konoye, three times premier of Japan." Lt. Haselby, a member of a cavalry unit in Japan, was one of a group of American soldiers who entered the Konoye home to take away his body.

Similar pictures, showing Lt. Haselby with another officer at the Konoye bedside, appeared in Time magazine and daily papers.

The young officer went overseas in October, a member of the First Cavalry Division. His wife, Mrs. Pauline Haselby, resides at Logansport.

Due to the continued use of higher-grade coal by the public, coal supplies dropped early in 1945. The decline in coal production in Germany drove worldwide demand for coal from other sources. Fortunately, the shortage was short-lived.

Coal Shortage Hits Community; Ask Aid

Faced with empty coal yards and urgent appeals for fuel in continuing sub-zero temperatures, a Citizens' Coal Committee composed of members of the town board was authorized last night in an emergency civic meeting, to make a call for coal to relieve a coal shortage which has reached the critical stage in Winamac.

The Red Cross chapter also joined in the call and will assist in supervising a fair distribution of coal which might be received by any of the dealers until relief is secured.

Representatives of the dealers in town and dealers attending the meeting had frankly admitted that they were unable to supply the demand because they were not receiving enough.

Preliminary estimates show that between 500 and 600 homes in the community's trading area are in need of coal.

One dealer reported that he had received 326 appeals for coal in less than three days. Therefore, all four dealers estimated that they have a combined total of 700 orders on file.

"We can't begin to fill all these orders so we have been refusing to take any additions or make any promises," the dealers said.

Representative invited John Kreft, manager of the Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Inc.,

Co-Operative Elevator Company;

Harry Pearson, owner of Pearson's Coal and Groceries, and Virgil

Belcher, representing the Von

Tobel Lumber Co.

"We don't know how to get the coal," dealers told the board.

"But we must get coal shipped, because some people are really anxious to get it."

The county court house is running low on coal and with few coal cars in the yards, the dealers and committee men to clear all coal orders through the Red Cross office in an effort to avoid duplicating efforts further to families according to need.

All coal deliverymen are being instructed to deliver coal in home where more than ten days' supply is on hand. All orders have also been limited to one ton to a customer.

The Coal Shortage Is Real Here

Every effort has been made by the coal merchants of Winamac to give residents of this community an adequate supply of fuel.

To date, deliveries from the mines have not been sufficient to supply the demand.

The Situation Is Serious

If you have more than 10-days supply of coal on hand, please do not place an order until your need is urgent.

The Red Cross is assisting all dealers in allocating the coal which reaches Winamac. No more than one ton can be spared to a customer.

Your co-operation is asked to save fuel.

Help yourself and your neighbor by conserving every lump of coal.

Acute

Coal Shortage Induces Star City Man To Take from Car On Siding.

Thomas Depoy of Star City pleaded guilty to charges of petit larceny in Justice Dennis Miller's court Monday and paid fine of $1 and costs of $4. Charges were placed against him by William Strahle, detective for the Pennsylvania railroad, after Mr. Depoy took a ton and a half of coal from a railroad car on a siding at Star City. He also agreed to repay the railroad $15 for the amount of coal taken.

Though officials did not recommend making this practice regular, they were sympathetic with Mr. Depoy, who stated that he wanted to buy coal but it was not available and that he took this means of getting fuel for his home.

Federal Agency Orders Coal Shipped Here

"Two carloads a day for the next ten days" was the promise issued at Indianapolis last week end when the critical coal shortage in Winamac was laid before officials in the office of the Solid Fuels Administration for War.

Officials first stated, on being informed of the situation here, that it would be necessary to form a local distributing agency. When informed that this had already been done by formation of a committee composed of town councilmen and officers of the Red Cross, the two-car-a-day order followed promptly.

Pulaski County (IN) Democrat 8 Feb 1945: 1.

Local dealers have been informed that mines have already consigned coal to Winamac. It was stated by the Indianapolis officials, in connection with the order, that federal regulations prohibit any dealer from delivering coal to any customer who has more than a five-day supply of any kind of fuel; also from delivering more than a ton of coal to any home, or a seven-day supply, whichever is the larger.

The situation in Winamac has been eased during the past few days by the arrival of a few cars of coal, and dealers express the opinion that the SFAW order will provide fuel for all if due co-operation can be had.

Coal Crisis Eased Here By SFAW

A promise of "two carloads of coal a day for the next 10 days," beginning the first part of next week, to relieve the critical coal shortage for Winamac and the surrounding community, was given in Indianapolis Friday by the Solid Fuels Administration for War.

W. G. Stockton, director of the Indiana SFAW office, issued a directive ordering the "two car-loads a day" and already coal dealers have been informed that coal has been shipped and is now enroute.

Mr. Stockton issued the order after he was informed that Winamac coal yards were without a lump of coal and that the town board and Red Cross were working together to provide fuel for families without heat.

The SFAW official pointed out that every dealer is prohibited, by federal order, from delivering any coal to a consumer unless the consumer has on hand less than a 5-day supply of usable fuel of any kind.

Winamac (IN) Republican 8 Feb 1945: 1.

The federal directive also prohibits dealers from delivering more than a ton of coal to any home in the community or a minimum of seven days' supply, whichever is the larger.

The government order also directed dealers that any emergency case referred to them should receive priority over all other deliveries.

Mr. Stockton pointed out that these orders will remain in effect until further notice.

Arrival of a few cars of coal in Winamac during the past few days helped ease the situation. The Red Cross, through which all emergency coal orders are being cleared, reported that all local dealers, including the Co-Operative Elevator Co., Farm Bureau Co-Operative Association, Inc., Pearson's Coal and Groceries, and Von Tobel Lumber Company, were all cooperating to provide coal for emergency cases.

All dealers were of the opinion that SFAW order to send the coal into Winamac will relieve the situation if the weather does not remain too severe.

BUY WAR BONDS

REMEMBER this touching picture of a little girl's farewell to her war-bound daddy? Appearing shortly after Pearl Harbor, it touched the hearts of millions of Americans and helped to launch the greatest voluntary savings program in all history.

That girl is three years older today. In that time, our enemies have been pushed steadily back toward their own frontiers... thanks in no small measure to the overwhelming flood of tanks, ships, planes and guns that more than 85 million Americans have poured into the fight through their purchases of War Bonds.

But her daddy is still at war—the fight goes on—the money you've put into Bonds is still needed, just as it was after Pearl Harbor. KEPT IN THE FIGHT—KEPT IN WAR BONDS—IT WILL CONTINUE TO WORK FOR VICTORY.

KEEP FAITH WITH OUR FIGHTERS—Buy War Bonds For Keeps

—But Her Daddy's Still in the Fight, and the War Bonds You Bought Back in the Days of Pearl Harbor are Still Needed in the Fight, Too—for Victory!

TORY—AND FOR YOU.

For just as that little girl has grown, so have the War Bonds you bought three years ago. The $100 Bond you paid $75 for then is already worth more than you paid—and how swiftly the time has passed! In another year it will be worth $80—at maturity, $100. Here's money you'll need later—for education, repairs, replacements, retirement—just as your country needs it today.

Approximately $50,000 worth of Series E War Bonds must be purchased this week by individuals if Pulaski county is to go over the top in the "Mighty Seventh" War Loan Drive. Clarence Long, county war finance chairman, said yesterday.

The county has gone over the top on all other drives, but additional E Bond purchases must be made if the record is to remain unbroken.

Here is just a few of the nation's boys in service. Their pictures make a seven. Let it remind you of the "Mighty Seventh" Loan Drive.

Cpl. Fred Long of Monterey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Long, has been overseas more than two and a half years and served as transportation dispatcher for an engineer aviation unit in Italy until the end of the war.

Elwood DeHority, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clay DeHority of Anderson, nephew of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Nogle of near Winamac and grandson of William White, is serving on a Marine training ship, the U. S. S. Marine Devil.

S-Sgt. Jacob Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob G. Wagner, and husband of Jo Ann Wagner, is shown here at the end of the war after he had flown in many bombing attacks against Germany. He holds the Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters. He is a ball turret gunner.

Jap Balloon Kills Kin of Starke County Family

Joan and Dick Patzke, children of the former Mildred Shiveley of California township, in Starke county, were two of five children and a preacher's wife killed May 5 near Lakeview, Oregon, by a high explosive bomb which was part of the equipment of a fallen Japanese balloon. News of the fatality was only recently released by the war department.

Joan spied the Japanese balloon and called the other youngsters, one of whom tugged at a piece of the balloon with the result that it exploded. The preacher, Rev. Archie Mitchell, was the only survivor.

Mrs. Patzke is a sister of Mrs. Frank Crome, who now lives in California township. She attended school in Aldine. The Crome family received a letter from the Oregon folks last week.

After the Bataan peninsula fell to the Japanese in April 1942, 75,000 American and Filipino prisoners of war were force-marched 60 miles in one week without food or water. Between 5,000 and 18,000 Filipinos and 500 to 650 Americans died from either exhaustion or murder by guards. Two of Our Boys, Clarence and John, were on that 1942 March, which no one back home knew about it until 1945.

CRUSH BATAAN ARMY

AMERICAN AND FILIPINO FORCE OF 36,853 MEN IS OVERWHELMED BY JAPS

Weary Troops of General Jonathan Wainwright Who Have Been Subjected to Constant Assaults by Greatly Superior Japanese Forces Are Subdued on Philippines Peninsula After Gallant Three-Month Stand Which Parallels Battle of Alamo for Sheer Courage and Gallantry; Fortress of Corregidor, Fort Drum, Fort Mills and Fort McKinley in Manila Bay Still Remain in American Hands.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—(UPI)—Thirty-six thousand American and Filipino troops, exhausted by short rations, disease and lack of relief, were overwhelmed on Bataan Peninsula today by a fresh and numerically superior enemy.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, who disclosed for the first time the number and plights of the brave Bataan defenders, was unable to say how many of the 36,853 Yanks and Filipinos would be in each of the categories of casualties—killed, captured or wounded.

He said that every effort was being made to get as many of them as possible to Corregidor and other American fortresses that still hold out in Manila Bay. But it appeared doubtful that any substantial number could be evacuated.

Stimson, who had just conferred with President Roosevelt, told a press conference that in addition to the U. S.-Filipino troops on bloody Bataan there were some 20,000 civilian refugees there.

They had fled to Bataan at the time of the Japanese occupation of Manila. Their presence made the food situation more critical and handicapped the defenders.

ENEMY SMASHES THRU DEFENDERS

"Our troops, out-numbered, worn down by attack, exhausted by insufficient rations, and disease prevailing in that area, had their lines broken and enveloped by the enemy," Stimson said.

"Our defenses on Bataan have been overthrown. Corregidor is still fighting.

"A long and gallant defense has been worn down and overthrown.

"There is nothing but praise for the men who have so ably conducted an epic chapter in the history of the Philippines."

As President Roosevelt and Gen. Douglas MacArthur before him, Stimson pledged that the United States would win back the Philippines from the Japanese and restore independence to the Filipino people who has acquitted themselves so gallantly in the hopeless fight.

The secretary disclosed that only yesterday President Roosevelt had messaged Lt. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, the American Philippines commander, that he would leave to him any decisions to be made regarding the battle.

This was taken to mean that Mr. Roosevelt had empowered Wainwright with full authority to surrender his exhausted army if necessary to save further bloodshed and sacrifice that no longer could accomplish any purpose.

WAINWRIGHT AT FORT MILLS

Wainwright is now at Fort Mills on Corregidor, from where he sent the fateful news of Bataan early this morning. His report of the "complete physical exhaustion" of his men was made public in a brief communiqué at 5:15 A. M. EWT.

Stimson disclosed at his press conference the hitherto secret information that ever since Gen. MacArthur had first consolidated his U.S.-Filipino forces on Bataan the army and navy had been able to get ammunition and limited food supplies to him by breaching the Japanese blockade at considerable cost in ships and men.

The supply organization was directed from Australia by Brig. Gen. Patrick E. Hurley, former secretary of war in the Hoover cabinet and now minister to New Zealand.

The 36,853 U. S.-Filipino effective last reported in Wainwright's defense lines did not include the forces on Corregidor and other harbor forts at the entrance of Manila Bay, or scattered forces elsewhere on Luzon and other Philippine islands.

ONE FULL REGIMENT ON SCENE

It was disclosed that there was only one complete regular U. S. army infantry regiment in the Philippines at the outbreak of the war, the 31st, long stationed in the islands. The Philippine scout force—Philippine troops in the U. S. army—numbered about 10,500.

There were about 5,000 air personnel in the Philippines. As the Americans lost their planes, owing to the superiority of the Japanese in the air, at least 2,000 and possibly more of these joined the defense forces as a rifle-carrying infantry.

Last summer two tank battalions were sent to the Philippines, as well as some mobile artillery. This artillery proved a vital factor in protecting the defenses and for a time apparently was appreciably superior to the Japanese.

"Full details are not available, but this situation indicates the probability that the defenders of Bataan have been overcome."

Wainwright's men suffered heavy losses during days of fighting. They had no planes to combat all kinds of enemy aircraft that bombed and strafed them front and rear. They had no reinforcements and most of the kinds of fresh American troops. They had only courage and the hope that reinforcements would be forthcoming. But Japanese domination of the entire surrounding waters prevented the dispatch of reinforcements.

Few Boats Available

Only a few small boats such as the torpedo boats which took MacArthur out of Corregidor—could make the passage through the Japanese blockade. No means could be found for getting men or serial reinforcements to the front.

It was reported in many circles that many of the troops on Bataan could be evacuated to the island forts on Manila Bay.

The question to be answered now is how long can Corregidor and the bay forts hold out. The lack of ammunition caused the hold out for so long, and that is gone the two-mile strait between the southern tip of Bataan and Corregidor.

For three days the war department has reported that Wainwright's men suffered heavy casualties—and that meant large numbers of men were fighting with rifles for the defense of land that they were yielding inch by inch.

East Flank Crumbles

Finally Yamashita succeeded at the task which drove his predecessor, Gen. MacArthur, from Manila. He reportedly took his life in the Manila hotel suite where MacArthur had lived prior the withdrawal from Manila.

There were no details about how the envelopment of the east flank took place, but it was reported that the communiqué from last week have repeatedly mentioned Japanese attempts to land forces from boats behind that end of the defenders' lines. Only yesterday a communiqué reported that naval defenders had blasted such a sea-borne invasion.

The peak of the Japanese attack came yesterday when fresh assault troops were rushed into the front lines, frequently, dive bombers and aerial incendiary-cum-bombs harassed Wainwright's rear supply depots.

The next phase of the battle for control of Manila Bay will be the capture of the island forts. The big guns on Corregidor, and at the forts on three other small islands at the entrance to the bay probably will be able to keep the enemy at bay as long as ammunition holds out.

But the loss of the Luzon mainland did not mean that it was abandoned forever.

When MacArthur arrived in Australia March 17 to take command of all Allied forces in the southwest Pacific he could hold out only for a week.

"A primary purpose of this is the defense of the Philippines, and we come through and I shall return."

Third Prison Ship is Sunk; 800 Men Lost

Naval Lieutenant is One of Two Men Who Escaped From Japanese Captors

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—(UP)—A navy officer today disclosed a third sinking of a jam-packed Japanese prison ship, with a loss of more than 800 Americans.

The vessel was sunk Dec. 15 by American planes which could not distinguish it from a cargo ship. In this case, however, the cargo was 1,600 Americans held in the ship's holds at rifle point. Fewer than half survived.

In two previously-disclosed cases allied submarines unknowingly sank two Japanese prison ships. The first such incident occurred Sept. 7, when only 83 out of 750 American prisoners aboard the ship survived. On Oct. 24 another prison ship carrying 1,800 Americans was sunk, with only five known survivors.

Brings Toll to 3,200

Apparently upward of 3,200 Americans perished in the three tragic incidents of war.

The story of the Dec. 15 sinking was related by Lt. George K. Petritz, of Rockford, Ill., in a press conference at the navy department. He said he and an army private were the only two out of the 1,600 prisoners aboard who got away from the Japs.

The 27-year-old lieutenant told how he and the other prisoners were stuffed into the ship's small holds on Dec. 15, 1944. That night the vessel steamed quietly out of Manila harbor.

The next day, American planes subjected the vessel to intermittent bombing attacks which caused some casualties among the prisoners.

Jap Civilians Escape

That night Japanese civilians were taken off the damaged craft. But a guard of Japanese soldiers stayed aboard and kept the prisoners in the holds at rifle point.

The next morning—Dec. 15—the ship was bombed again. Fewer than 800 survivors got into the water and swam for shore, Petritz said.

He said most of those who lost their lives were prisoners unable to get out of the hold before the ship went down.

Conditions aboard the vessel were frightful, the officer told newsmen. Half of the prisoners were put into the after hold of the vessel, which was less than the size of a regulation tennis court and only as high as a man's head.

Some of the Americans died from suffocation in the short time they were aboard the vessel.

Recognize Prisoner Son In Magazine Picture

The War Department has notified Mr. and Mrs. Elmus Kline, who moved this week from Marion to Lawton, that no trace has been found of their son Clarence, who was taken prisoner by the Japs with the fall of Corregidor. The last they heard from him was in May, 1944, but they identified him as one of the men in the Corregidor death march picture published in Time magazine. He enlisted in the Coast Guard while working as a cowboy in Montana, and was sent to the Philippines about a year before the Pearl Harbor attack.

Father Learns Of Son's Death In April, 1942

Pvt. John Shank, Missing 3½ Years, Dies on Bataan, War Dept. States

Bernard Shank of Pulaski received word from the War Department that his son, Pvt. John Shank, had died on Bataan on April 15, 1942, from exhaustion. The young man had been listed as missing in action since the fall of Corregidor in May of that year, and it was thought then that he might have been taken prisoner. This is the first word received by the father in three and a half years.

A graduate of Pulaski high school in 1939, John enlisted in the Army in the spring of 1941. He received his training for the signal corps in New Jersey and was sent to the Philippines in the summer of 1941. Two brothers have recently been discharged from service—Carl, who served in North Africa, and Albin, who received his commission in the field in Europe.

The letter received by Mr. Shank reads, in part:

"It is with profound regret that I confirm the recent telegram informing you of the death of your son, Pvt. John H. Shank, who was previously reported missing in action in the Philippine Islands from the date of the surrender of Corregidor, May 7, 1942. An official message has now been received which states that he died at Bataan, P. I., on April 15, 1942, as the result of exhaustion."

Dies on Bataan

PVT. JOHN H. SHANK

"I realize the great suspense you have endured during this unfortunately long period and now, the finality to those hopes which you have cherished for his safety. Although little may be said or done at this time to alleviate your grief, it is my fervent hope that later the knowledge that he gave his life for his country may be of sustaining comfort to you."

"I extend my profound sympathy in your bereavement."

The letter was signed by Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, acting adjutant general.

John was born June 20, 1921, and grew up in the Pulaski vicinity. Surviving, besides the father and two brothers mentioned, are another brother, James of Pulaski, and a sister, Mrs. Carol Berger.

This report makes Pvt. Shank Pulaski county's first war casualty.

Son Lost on Jap Prison Ship, Parents Learn

Mr. and Mrs. Elmus Kline of Lawton received a message Tuesday informing them that their son Clarence lost his life on December 15 in the sinking of a Japanese prison ship.

Clarence was taken prisoner by the Japs with the fall of Corregidor. The parents last heard from him in May of 1944, but they identified him as one of the men in a death-march picture published in a magazine a few weeks ago. The message this week confirmed their fears that he was a war victim. He was thirty-five years of age last January 3.

A boyhood resident of this community, Clarence went west as a young man and entered the Coast Guard while working as a cowboy in Montana. He was sent to the Philippines two years before the Pearl Harbor attack. During his residence in Montana, he was married to Miss Dorothy Westgard, but she and a daughter preceded him in death.

The parents moved from here to Marion some years ago, but recently purchased property at Lawton and moved back.

Tell Me about My Boy

Mr. and Mrs. Elmus Kline received a telegram from the War Department that their son, Pfc. Clarence Kline, was killed when a Japanese boat, carrying prisoners, was sunk on December 15, 1944.

Young Kline was made a prisoner of the Japs at the fall of Corregidor May 7, 1939. The boat in which he was being transferred bore no markings that it carried prisoners of war and was sunk by the U. S. Navy forces.

The death was another in a series of tragedies that had marked his life since enlisting at Billings, Mont., Nov. 6, 1939. He arrived in the Philippines in December, 1939.

Married to Dorothy Westgard of Montana on April 12, 1935, both his wife and a baby daughter preceded him in death.

At least 24 of Our Boys were German prisoners of war. Only two were identified as Japanese prisoners of war, both on the Bataan Death March. John died during the March. Clarence died of disease in 1944, although by newspaper account, he was assumed to die by “friendly fire” while aboard an unmarked Japanese prison ship.

Missing Man Prisoner

Lt. Harold Meiser of Talma, former resident of Monterey, is now a prisoner of Germany. Early in December his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Meiser of Talma, received word from the War Department that he has been missing since November 25 after a flight over Australia, and they received word of his capture last week. He was a bomber pilot, based in Italy.

PFC Deverele Clawson, who was taken prisoner at the same time, has returned to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Clawson of the Medaryville vicinity. He was reported missing in Africa on February 17, 1943. Three months later his parents were notified that he was a prisoner in Germany.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hettinger of Star City received word Saturday through the Red Cross that their son, PFC Verne Hettinger, had been released from a prison camp in Germany and is probably on his way home. His wife, the former Miss Iva Morris, and their two daughters live with her parents at Buffalo.

PFC Hettinger served in the infantry and was first reported missing on November 19. His parents received that word early in December. The latter part of March they received a card from him telling them he was a prisoner. The young man entered service January 5, 1944, and went overseas last August, serving in England, France, Belgium and Germany.

As far as the Greatest Generation thought, FDR had been President “forever”. His death came as an unexpected blow, but the country “soldiered on”. There was no acknowledgement in the Republican.

Entire Nation Mourns Death Of Franklin D. Roosevelt; Vast Tasks Face Truman

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT
JANUARY 30, 1882—APRIL 12, 1945.

AS THE guns of America's fighting forces sounded over closer the doom of Nazi Germany and Imperial Japan, Franklin Delano Roosevelt died in Warm Springs, Georgia, where he had been resting for 10 days.

Death resulted from a cerebral hemorrhage at 4:35 p.m. on April 12. Mr. Roosevelt was 63. He had been President for 12 years, one month and nine days. The White House was announced as the site of the funeral, with interment at the family estate at Hyde Park, N.Y.

Less than four months had elapsed since he had taken his historic oath of office for a fourth term. Only a few weeks before he had returned from the Yalta conference where in company with Marshal Stalin of Russia and Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain he had labored to build an enduring peace.

Fate denied Franklin Roosevelt the chance to enjoy the fruits of victory over the Axis. Yet history seemed destined to enshrine him as one of the immortal American Presidents. And every citizen who mourned the untimely passing of the Commander-in-Chief felt that he was a casualty of the war just as surely as every G.I., Marine and Sailor who had fallen in battle.

Never before had an American President died in wartime. Abraham Lincoln fell under Assassin Booth's bullet just five days after the surrender of General Lee's army at Appomattox. Woodrow Wilson lived to see victory over Germany in World War I, but he fought a losing battle for the League of Nations and died early in 1924, a defeated leader. Many historians believe Lincoln's greatness might have been dimmed in the conflicts of the reconstruction that followed the War Between the States, just as Wilson's prestige was lost in the conflict over the league that followed World War I. Thus Franklin Roosevelt, dying at the height of his career just as victory was to be achieved over Germany, seemed likely to live in history as a great man.

As the American people from Main Street to Riverside Drive mourned the death of Franklin Roosevelt, their prayers went for his successor, Harry S. Truman. For on the shoulders of this slight gray, 60-year-old Missourian he had laid a responsibility such no American President had ever borne.

What the consequences of the President's death would be to the United States and the world, time alone would tell. But as Americans recovered from their first shock at the news, they quickly determined two things. The war must be prosecuted to as speedy and victorious a finish as possible. Lasting peace must be established.

Unlike the “log-cabin” presidents, Franklin Delano Roosevelt was not born into poverty. When Franklin arrived at Hyde Park, N.Y., on January 30, 1882, he came into a large, comfortable home that had been in the family for many generations. The Roosevelts had been thrifty landowners in the Hudson valley since the first of the family came over from Holland. On his mother's side also there was a substantial fortune. Among his ancestors were many men who had served the state in various capacities.

Young Franklin attended the very fashionable Groton school, where he prepared for Harvard university. After completing the liberal arts course he entered Columbia U. law school, from which he was graduated. (CONTINUED ON PAGE SIX) ated in 1907. Two years earlier, however, he married his distant cousin, Anna Eleanor Roosevelt. Eleanor was a niece of Theodore Roosevelt, at that time in the White House.

President's Life Was Characterized By Vigorous Action

After two years of legal practice, Franklin entered politics, running on the Democratic ticket for the New York state senate. He was defeated but nominated a strong Republican candidate. From the beginning of his career he identified himself with reform movements, opposing the powerful Tammany organization in the statehouse. He was re-elected in 1912, in which time he had become a leader of the anti-Tammany faction.

Woodrow Wilson appointed Roosevelt assistant secretary of the navy. When World War I broke out Roosevelt proved himself an efficient administrator, handling billions of dollars' worth of contracts for ships and supplies. He served in this post throughout the war.

Ran for Vice President.

In 1920 the Democratic national convention chose him as running mate for James Cox. While campaigning for the vice presidency Roosevelt made many acquaintances valuable in later political life. Cox being defeated, F.D.R. returned to legal practice.

The following year the greatest tragedy of his life struck him—partial paralysis. The big, strong young man became a bedridden invalid. For months he lay without ambition, almost without hope. Slowly his powerful will took command, however, and by degrees he partially regained the use of his muscles. It was during his convalescence at Warm Springs, Ga., that he determined to do what could to eradicate the scourge that had almost ruined him. The “March of Dimes” campaign was the result.

At the Democratic convention of 1932, Roosevelt aligned himself with the group supporting Alfred E. Smith, New York's governor. When Smith was nominated in 1932, Roosevelt ran for governor of his state and was elected. At the end of his two-year term he was again elected, this time by the greatest majority ever given to a New York gubernatorial candidate.

As governor he continued the reform and improvement policies of his predecessor Smith. His achievements attracted nationwide attention. As the depression that began late in 1929 deepened, his efforts to control the mounting business failures, unemployment and distress in his state revealed his abilities as a vigorous leader in grave times.

Swept in as President.

When the national convention met in Chicago in 1932 Roosevelt was quickly chosen. He was swept into office by a plurality of seven million votes, carrying 42 states. Both houses went Democratic.

Before he could take office a wave of bank failures threatened the whole economic structure. The famous “bank moratorium” order, suspending virtually all official acts, closed all banks until they could be reorganized on a sounder basis, thus preventing disastrous runs. In the spring of 1933 came the repeal of the 18th, or prohibition amendment, and the National Industrial Recovery Act, or “NRA,” under which extensive emergency powers were granted to the President. A series of public works were authorized to combat unemployment, together with huge appropriations for direct relief.

The numerous executive and legislative acts of this first term were approved in general as necessary in the face of widespread suffering. A phrase from one of the President's speeches, “a new deal,” developed into a title for the whole Roosevelt program.

In 1936 the convention in Philadelphia nominated Roosevelt by acclamation on the first ballot. He carried 46 states in the elections. The result was overwhelming that man. No Dealers began to call it a “mandate from the people.” During this second term a great number of measures were passed to increase the economic security of the individual, particularly the workers, farmers and small businessmen.

Throughout his career as President Franklin Roosevelt was known as “president of the people.” This title was first conferred in 1932 when he flew west to Chicago from Albany, N.Y., to address the Democratic convention that had nominated him. It continued after his election as a result of his informal methods of transacting business. But it reached a climax in his decision to seek a third term in 1940 and a fourth term in 1944.

The New Pilot

33rd PRESIDENT OF U.S.

The new President faces the immediate task of directing American participation in the United Nations—blessed for the human world organization. He likewise faces the responsibility of establishing working relations with other members of the Big Three so that the personal cooperation which existed between Franklin D. Roosevelt, Joseph Stalin and Winston Churchill in leading the Allies toward victory may be maintained in helping win the peace. He faces the long-range job of guiding the nation to postwar economic prosperity once Nazi Germany and Japan are finally defeated.

Known as a plain, modest man who has not dramatized himself personally, President Truman nevertheless has demonstrated on many occasions that he can be a leader of force and determination. His work as chairman of the Truman committee in the Senate investigating the conduct of the war is cited as an example of this. And his conduct of the Vice Presidency has shown that he can work successfully with political leaders of both parties in getting needed measures passed and in reconciling opposing points of view.

The 33rd President was born in Lamar, Mo., May 8, 1884, although the home of the family for four generations had been on a farm near Independence, Mo.

Served in World War I.

When World War I broke out, Truman became captain of Battery D in the field artillery of the 35th Division and saw action at St. Mihiel and in the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

Back in Independence, Truman and his family owned a hardware business. He married his boyhood sweetheart, Bess Wallace, and they have one daughter, Mary Margaret.

Truman later turned to politics for a career, which started with his election as County Judge of Jackson county, Mo. In 1922 he became a prominent member of the Jackson county, with the endorsement of Tom Pendergast, political boss of Kansas City. He studied law at night and supervised the construction of a great highway system.

Franklin D. Roosevelt

(Prepared and presented by Harry W. McDowell at Community Memorial Services in Winamac on Saturday, April 14.)

Franklin Delano Roosevelt is dead. Mortal as he was, he has gone the way of all mortality. That is God's immutable law.

Sudden death is ever a shock. But there is in this death something more than mere shock. In the midst of the greatest holocaust of death and destruction the world has yet seen, this sudden passing has blotted out for the moment all other tragic events.

This man, in life, more than any other mere mortal, exemplified to all the people of this earth the liberty and justice he so valiantly fought for them. No other mortal has ever so willingly given his life to the continued support and acclaim from his own and other nations. Most men must die to be appraised. This man might well be content with the repeated appraisal accorded him while yet living.

Physical affliction oftentimes hardens men's minds and sensitizes them. Under such circumstances many have resented and refused to receive him to tell the great truth that life and health and strength are God's gift to man, and that He is omnipotent. This man, who has gone from us, had the spiritual strength to accept his physical infirmity as a test of his faith in his Creator. He arose from a living death to fulfill his mission in life. No more outstanding example of physical and mental courage and spiritual faith can be found in annals of life here or elsewhere.

Did he accomplish his full mission? Volumes may and probably will be written on that query. And all of it will be wasted effort. Only He alone who first gave, then halted, then prolonged this remarkable life can supply the answer.

To him who remains to do all things humanly possible to achieve the goals he sought, it would seem that a cruel fate has here intervened; that he could not hasten his calling until he had seen, at least, the victory over oppression for which he has given his whole strength; that he might well have been permitted to read, perchance, to sign some protocol that shall spell the termination of all war. But it has been willed otherwise. He has been spared. His tongue and pen are mute. His works and labors are ended.

To America and to the world he stands to-day

“Like some tall cliff that lifts its mighty form: Swells from the vale and midway meets the storm; Though round its breast, the rolling clouds may spread.

External sunshine settles on its head.”

May the Great God who gave him to us and to the world and spared him for a little while grant that the world liberty and security he so devoutly sought and died in striving for may come to pass; and that his courage and hope and faith shall live after him as his epitaph and as an inspiration to all men everywhere.

Winamac shared an indigenous namesake with the USS Winamac.

Fire Boat in Pacific Waters Named After Gallant Old Chief Winamac

A new 325-ton, dual-purpose fire boat, the USS Winamac, that features two new fire fighting inventions, has just reported for service at the Naval drydocks on Terminal Island, Calif., according to a report to The Democrat from Lt. John Barker of San Francisco. Lt. Barker is in the public relations press section of the Twelfth Naval District, and said that ships of this class are named after Indian chiefs.

Capable of producing 3,000 gallons of water per minute at the scene of any waterfront fire, the Winamac is also rigged as a tug and will give added fire protection by towing any flame-stricken vessel away from the drydock piers where other units of the fleet await repairs.

The new fire fighting devices are the inventions of August H. Benson, former Los Angeles fire department captain and now Fire Prevention Engineer at the drydocks.

Best of the new improvements is a three-way manifold, which enables three 2½-inch discharge lines to be supplied by one 3½-inch supply line taken from the ship's fire pumps. This triples the distribution of water at the scene of the fire.

In addition, Benson has rigged six rail standees, equipped with universal joints, which take care of the back pressure at the nozzle. This device saves manpower by enabling one man to handle a nozzle and hose that ordinarily would require six men to hold. Rigged on the quarter railing of the fire boat, they are ideal for fighting fires on or underneath piers.

The seventeen-man crew, in charge of Chief Boatswain's Mate Howard W. Crosby of Long Beach, Calif., drills daily in the use of the two portable fire pumps, each capable of producing 500 gallons of water per minute; foam proportioners that generate a thick covering of foam to smother oil and gasoline fires; the operation of two high-pressure monitors capable of shooting a stream of water more than 100 feet; and the rapid coupling of more than 1100 feet of fire hose.

When not in use as a fire boat, the Winamac will be used as an auxiliary tug to dock fleet units at the drydocks. She was constructed at Jacksonville, Fla., last year and since November has been in service at the Navy Target Repair Base, San Pedro.

While the distant daily newspapers had headlines and special editions about the end of war in Europe and with Japan, the local Democrat and Republican were more restrained.

Home Folks Calm as V-E Day Is Announced

President Tells Nation of Total Nazi Surrender

A community devotional service was held in the Presbyterian church Tuesday evening, following formal announcement that morning by President Truman of Germany's unconditional surrender.

The Rev. R. W. Crosby of the Presbyterian church, the Rev. C. R. Earle of the Methodist church, and the Rev. Donald Ashton of the Christian church were in charge of the service. Music was rendered by a combined choir of the Winamac and Pulaski Presbyterian churches.

In making his announcement by radio, the President told the country that the war was only half over and warned the Japanese that they can expect nothing but complete destruction unless they too surrender.

Mr. Truman proclaimed the end of the war in what he called a "solemn but a glorious hour," and called on the nation to pray for strength to bring about the end "of treacherous tyranny of the Japanese."

Winamac citizens conducted no celebration of V-E Day, due to the serious problem yet to be faced in the Pacific.

Europe Victory Heard Calmly

Pulaski county took the end of the war in Europe calmly and reverently this week. When the first radio flash came Monday, small groups gathered around radios downtown to hear the news as it progressed.

When it became apparent that the news would be made official the next day, the groups dispersed to go about their business.

A union thanksgiving service was held Tuesday night in the Presbyterian church sponsored by the Presbyterian, Methodist and Christian churches.

Services have been scheduled through the week by the Catholic church which also held services Tuesday night.

Services were also held at St. Luke's Lutheran church in Winamac and St. Mark's church in Medaryville on Tuesday night.

Special services are planned in all churches Sunday in accordance with President Truman's proclamation.

Evening of Prayer, Noise And Parades

Hardly had the radio flashed the official report of Japan's surrender, shortly after six o'clock Tuesday evening, when the fire siren in Winamac sounded its raucous voice repeatedly, in celebration of the glad tidings.

Church bells pealed, guns were fired, and cars with blaring horns formed an impromptu parade that coursed streets in all parts of town. At nearly every corner a new parader joined the procession, until it was blocks in length. Pretty soon a fire truck took place as the lead vehicle.

Happy faces and waving arms, many carrying flags, gleamed from every car. Among the happiest faces was that of a woman driving a car in which hung a flag bearing three stars.

Union Prayer Service.

As previously planned, union prayer services were held at the Methodist church at eight o'clock. Special addresses were delivered by the Rev. E. J. Peter's of that church, the Rev. R. W. Crosby of the Presbyterian church, and the Rev. Donald Ashton of the Christian church. Vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. Francis Knarr and Miss Betty Phillips, with Miss Katherine Overholser and Mrs. Herschel Henry at the organ.

Joyous tumult continued in the downtown area until after midnight. The clapper on the clock bell in the court house tower was kept going almost continuously. A dozen servicemen at home on furlough, each carrying a big flag, led a parade of cheering children. Firecrackers boomed, and many car-drivers learned for the first time the trick of causing their engines to backfire.

Bonfire and Dancing.

A sound truck used by the Baker Show, here for the fair this week end, was brought down town to provide music for a street dance. A bonfire was started at the corner of Monticello and Meridian streets. Here the young folks—and many not still so young—took gleeful part in parades and snake dances. Many people from the country drove in to participate.

Business in town was suspended all day yesterday in celebration of the day for which all have yearned for so long.

Japs Quit; Surrender Is Complete

Japan has surrendered unconditionally, it was announced by President Truman at six o'clock Tuesday evening, August 14.

Offensive operations were ordered suspended everywhere. General of the Army Douglas A. MacArthur was designated supreme Allied commander to receive the formal surrender. He at once ordered Japanese officials to fly to a Pacific island on Friday, prepared to go from there to Manila to sign the documents.

In making the official announcement, President Truman read at a press conference a message relayed from Emperor Hirohito through the Swiss government, in which the Japanese ruler pledged surrender on the terms laid down by the Big Three conference at Potsdam.

Days of Suspense.

This message followed one of several days ago in which the Japanese government proposed to accept the Potsdam terms if assurance would be given that the emperor could remain on his throne. At the close of the conference between President Truman and officials of Britain, Russia and China, the Japs were informed that the emperor would not be displaced, but that he would at all times remain under orders of the Allied commander.

Many hours elapsed before the Japs replied to this ultimatum. A was designated supreme Allied commander to receive the formal statement that Japan had accepted. He at once ordered Japanese officials to fly to a Pacific island on Friday, prepared to go from there to Manila to sign the documents.

Rationing Relaxed.

Monday and most of Tuesday passed without further word, although there were numerous reports throughout the two days that a reply was being formulated or was on the way.

Along with announcement of the surrender President Truman disclosed that Selective Service was taking immediate steps to slash inductions from 80,000 to 50,000 a month, and that only men under twenty-six would be called.

Yesterday OPA announced an end to gasoline rationing, and withdrew canned vegetables, fuel oil and oil stoves from the ration list.

Town Is Wild As War Halts

A joyous whooping crowd of Pulaski county kids and grownups—from babies to 90-year-olds—milled into the Winamac streets Tuesday night to celebrate the end of the greatest of all wars.

Word of the peace spread quickly and shortly after 6 o'clock business houses which were open closed as people began to drift down town.

The court house tower rocked with blasts from the wailing fire siren. Evidently someone had been saving firecrackers for the occasion because soon they began to pop and the noise was deafening.

The fire department rolled out the truck and with siren proclaiming the victory headed a parade of nearly 100 cars filled with happy people who drove up and down the town streets, waving flags, tooting horns and making all the noise possible.

Shortly after 7:30 o'clock the noise quieted briefly while many persons went to their church where thanksgiving and prayer services were held.

Someone climbed into the court house tower and began ringing the bell of the clock. Hearing this, someone else turned on the fire siren in the same tower.

1918 Peace A Hot One Paper Says

How did Pulaski county celebrate the peace back in November, 1918?

Well, here is the answer, taken from the files of the Winamac Republican of November 14, 1918.

Never has this generation witnessed the like excitement with which the people of Winamac November 11, 1918, down in history as the most joyous day in the history of the world. Dignified business men leaped in the air, throwing away their hats in reckless abandonment. Our ladies dressed themselves, however, modest young women having total strangers, and the kids—say it was the 4th of July, Christmas, Hallowe'en and all their birthdays in one grand and glorious celebration.

In Winamac all within a radius of a mile were awakened just before 5 a.m. by the big siren at the power plant screaming the good news. At 5:01 half the kids of Winamac, who were not in school, were on the streets. Bells, whistles, horns and guns took up the demonstration within a few minutes.

The Winamac Band was out soon after breakfast, and the veterans, which had just returned after a month's vacation, were let out and the parade was headed by six boys carrying Old Glory spread out, then the band. Veteran Gee, Douglas carrying old Co. I flag under his left arm, followed by the school children. From the lots of the first grade in the front ranks to serious seniors they carried flags and banners which proclaimed the dawn of Peace On Earth.

Following the school children was Uncle Sam driving the horse with Bill Hohenzollern, murderer and Ex-Kaiser in his farewell appearance. Auto after auto, truck after truck, descended, filled with celebrants, their horns and cheering. The procession went from one end of town to the other on each street.

In the evening the band started a concert in Main street and within a quarter of an hour after supper the street was jammed with the entire population of Winamac and adjoining County. The noise was deafening. Dozens of men, women and girls, who had been filling up the square, were now on the streets. Bells, whistles, horns and guns took up the demonstration within a few minutes.

Even with Victory won, fats were still needed for industry. The reward for recycling fats rose to 4 "red points" which could be used as meat was still rationed until November 1945.

Now 4 POINTS FOR USED FATS

Help Increase Supplies of Soap and Other Peacetime Products By Saving More Used Fats

Industrial fats far short of last year! We are almost down to the bottom of the barrel. The nation's industrial fat supply is millions of pounds less than it was in 1944. We need fully as much as last year to help make the soaps and other civilian goods you want and need so badly. So . . .

If you want more soap and soap flakes . . . if you're dreaming of nylons, sheets, cotton fabrics and want them to hurry back to the store counters . . . you can help by saving those used kitchen fats as you never saved before! Save every drop, every day!

These fats are vitally necessary to help speed greater supplies of soaps and hundreds of other things—like new cars, electric washers, irons, refrigerators and tires. Industry must have these fats . . . to help get to you more quickly the peacetime products you've been longing to have for years!

So skim and scrape and scoop just as you did so faithfully before V-J Day. To prove how important it is, your government has increased the point bonus. So help meet this nation's need by continuing to save used fats. If you can't find a store that accepts used fats, call Home Demonstration or County Agent.

Nazi Prison Is Horror Site

The hell of a German Concentration camp, where murdered naked and decaying bodies of political prisoners and slave laborers of the Nazis were stacked like cordwood, is described by Lt. Col. Harold J. Halleck in a letter received this week written after he had visited the scenes of horror.

"I have seen with my own eyes a sight that proves beyond any doubt that the atrocities we have heard the Germans committed are true to the Nth degree," Col. Halleck wrote.

"In the yard of the camp were about 20 starved and dead men dressed in prison garb. All were emaciated beyond description, and lay there where they had been shot while herded together. Many of them would weigh 50 pounds.

"In a small building near were some naked bodies of men who had died of starvation, and they were stacked up exactly as cord wood is stacked. There was also a contraption similar to a guillotine who was running the place and where they were strapped and beaten with a club. The stables tell, I saw them march him off, they were forced to live in were and as I was driving up to the lined with strawticks on the cement floor, and they slept there out in a field and looked up just crowded in with more than 200 as they faced him around and shot in each stable.

"About a mile from the camp was the worst sight of all! There was a big compartmented trench the people dared not protest, or where hundreds of them had been they would meet the same fate buried. Apparently the Germans, themselves.

when defeat became apparent, had started to dig them up and burn been permitted to see this place, the bodies, thus destroying the evidence, but our arrival had been from now on! They are completely too soon, and only about half had at our mercy now, for they are been dug up.

"The incinerator was made of small rails (iron) laid parallel on cement blocks, and the whole thing was covered with half burned bodies. The incinerator was about 10 and 20 feet in size. The remnants of burned bones from what must have been hundreds of them were there in the ashes.

"Some rosters of the inmates were captured and revealed a mixture of German Jews, Poles, Czechs and other nationalities. There were also other political enemies of the Nazis on the rosters. All the dead had their hair shaven from their heads, and the stench in the living quarters was terrible.

"I also, this afternoon, saw my first summary execution, quite inadvertently. Some Russians had caught one of the guards of the place. He was a Russian himself but spoke German quite well, and was one of the collaborators. They tried to get him to talk and tell where they were strapped and beaten with a club. The stables tell, I saw them march him off, they were forced to live in were and as I was driving up to the lined with strawticks on the cement floor, and they slept there out in a field and looked up just crowded in with more than 200 as they faced him around and shot him with a pistol.

"This camp was in full view of quite a sizeable town. Perhaps the people dared not protest, or where hundreds of them had been they would meet the same fate buried. Apparently the Germans, themselves.

"Hundreds of our men have started to dig them up and burn been permitted to see this place, the bodies, thus destroying the and God pity the German soldier evidence, but our arrival had been from now on! They are completely too soon, and only about half had at our mercy now, for they are been dug up.

"While I was looking at the incinerator, a young officer came up and asked if my name was not Halleck. It was Lt. Shank, Barney's boy, who is with the 4th Armored Division. I had been wanting to see him and asked him about Ralph Miller. He had seen him the day before. Shank told me he was commissioned in the field recently. He is with the best outfit in the theatre. They have recently been given a presidential citation.

"To those of us who had any doubt as to the necessity of being here, this one experience removes all doubt about it. Such ruthless people must be destroyed.

"An airplane factory near this city has been completely destroyed by our air several months ago, apparently. There is not a single piece of it left intact. The war from here on out, with so much of vital Germany lost, along with destruction of what factories were

Col. Halleck, husband of Mrs. H. J. Halleck of Winamac, is serving as surgeon of the 80th Division which recently captured $100,000 worth of new surgical instruments, and vast stores of pharmaceutical supplies and complete facilities for the manufacture of precision instruments.

County Soldier Tells of Nazi Horror Camps

The following letter was received by Mr. and Mrs. George F. Poor of the Winamac vicinity from their son, PFC Kenneth Poor.

April 14
Germany

Dear Dad and Mother:

I was surely surprised yesterday when I learned of President Roosevelt's death. It's really too bad he couldn't have lived to see the final outcome of this struggle for free civilization.

I am sending you an article I cut from the Stars & Stripes (about the Ohrdruf concentration camp). I want you to read it because I saw with my own eyes exactly what it tells. It was the most terrible sight I have ever witnessed. I will try and explain a little of what I saw.

This concentration camp has barracks similar to some we have in the States. For beds they had burlap cloth stretched over a thin layer of straw—one piled right up against the other for maximum capacity. The floors are bare ground and very damp. There were pots and pans scattered around.

In one street there were approximately fifteen or twenty bodies in a circle where they had fallen after being murdered. They all had bullet holes through their heads and almost all had more in their

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE) includes stock, fixtures and building to them except skin and bones. They had been starved and beaten. Some had ragged clothes on and others were nude. They were all clean shaven, apparently from being lousy. I can't commence to explain just how they did look, exactly.

In another shed there were bodies (some thirty or forty) piled up just as we would think of stacking cordwood. They were all lime covered to devour the bodies. I would say they ranged in age from sixteen to old men.

Back in the States when I used to read about such things as this I chalked it up as war propaganda, but never again, after seeing that sight. I still can't imagine how one human being could be so cruel to another. I, now, more than ever, have no sympathy whatever for a German.

It's really too bad some of the people in the States who don't have the slightest idea there is a war on, or what war is like, couldn't have seen that. I'll bet there would be no more strikes or slackening of the war effort.

I won't write any more about this, although I could go on and on. It's one sight I shall never forget as long as I live.

I hope you are all feeling fine. I'm the same as ever and in the best of health.

Your loving son,

KENNY.

Marine from Indiana Writes Of 'Tokio Tillie'

(Gilbert P. Bailey, formerly editor of the Delphi Citizen, is now a sergeant in the marines and is listed as a combat correspondent for that branch of the armed service. He writes the following interesting story from the Marshall Islands.)

A Japanese woman radio commentator, known to U. S. Marines as "Tokio Tillie," is Bob Hope's chief rival among radio fans in these desolate Marshall Islands.

To all soldiers, sailors and marines who have set foot on Japanese-mandated territory, "Tillie" broadcasts nightly her dire accounts of current American "disasters" in the Marshalls and her terrible predictions of America's eventual downfall.

Broadcasts From Tokio.

A female Japanese counterpart of Germany's "Lord Haw-Haw," she is the only Jap commentator who has captured the imagination of the men who fought here.

"Tokio Tillie" broadcasts from Radio Tokio in good corn-belt English, without Nipponese accent. About dusk each evening her audience gathers to hear what "Tillie" has to say.

Traitorous Briton Lord Haw Haw Held

Man Who Betrayed His Country to Become Nazi Radio Propagandist Captured in Germany

WITH BRITISH SECOND ARMY, Germany, May 29—(UP)—The British Second army held William (Lord Haw Haw) Joyce, nasty-tongued British Nazi who ranted at his homeland over the German radio in custody today and sought means to try him as a war criminal.

(The authoritative British Press Association said Joyce would be tried for treason in England despite his naturalization as a German subject. It was possible that Britain would refuse to recognize the naturalization on grounds that it occurred during wartime. Treason can be punished by hanging.)

Logansport (IN) Pharos-Tribune 29 May 1945: 1

When "Tillie" speaks in generalities, she talks of "great surprises in store for the United States" or "Japan's golden opportunity to deal America a crushing blow."

Sometimes she commentates directly to the American fighting men now on Japanese territory:

"All the Marines who attacked the Marshall Islands have been killed," announced "Tillie" a few days after the operation. (U. S. Marines suffered an estimated 565 casualties, killed and wounded, in the attack by combined United States forces against the Marshall Islands.)

Promises Jap "Air Fleet."

"Sixty thousand Marines already have been killed," says "Tillie" in a clear, pleasant voice that reminds every home-sick boy of the girls back home.

No one knows who "Tillie" is or where she learned to talk like a girl from the American middle-west. But "Tokio Tillie" is fast becoming a nostalgic character, regarded with mingled curiosity and amusement.

Last night she gave us a final warning:

"If the Marines do not leave the Marshall Islands in four days," she said, "Japan will send the largest air fleet ever . . ."

"Lord Haw Haw"

AN ENGLISH TRAITOR who calls himself the original "Lord Haw Haw" was exposed and seized by U. S. troops at Alt' Aussee, Austria, while acting as interpreter for an American Military Government official. Norman Baillie Stewart, above, former British officer who spent five years in the tower of London for "selling his country for 50 pounds," admitted, after he was exposed, that he worked for the German propaganda ministry and foreign office for five years. Picture in Pittsburgh Paper Helps Officer Trap "Berlin Gertie"

PITTSBURGH, July 3—(UP)—A picture in a Pittsburgh newspaper led to the capture of "Berlin Gertie," dulcet-voiced Nazi radio propagandist.

The London edition of Stars and Stripes reported that "Gertie" — Gertrude Hahn, of Pittsburgh — was arrested after an American lieutenant saw her picture and recognized her as "the chick around the corner" in Windsheim, Germany.

Lt. William Hirsch, Jr., of Montclair, N. J., occupation officer in Windsheim, saw Gertrude's picture while leafing through a newspaper sent to one of his men.

The young woman, who once won a citizenship contest in a Pittsburgh high school, was arrested and put on the list of persons to be tried by the United War Crimes Commission, according to Stars and Stripes.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Johann Hahn, who have been living in Germany since 1938, denied that Gertrude broadcast propaganda.

"Our daughter wanted to further tolerance and understanding between Germany and the United States," Mrs. Hahn said. "Her broadcasts ended before America came into the war."

"They might have confused my daughter with someone else," her father added. "She's an American citizen . . . She used to describe fashion shows and tell about typical days in the lives of Germans during her year of radio work."

Charlie Jenkins got back from overseas the other day, discharged for wounds... and he was pretty well banged up. And you should have seen him pick up! From being scared of meeting people, Charlie got his confidence back and soon became his own self again.

Naturally, our town felt mighty bad about it. We wanted to sympathize with him and help him. But Doc Walters set us straight about that.

He said that what Charlie wanted most was to be accepted as one of the gang again... as if nothing had happened. So we asked him over to pitch horseshoes with his good hand, and enjoy a friendly glass of beer and chew the fat like old times.

From where I sit, Doc Walters gave us the right steer. The wounded men coming home don't want our sympathy or our overenthusiastic help. They want to be treated like the rest of us... with a chance to work and lead a normal life. And that's the least we can offer them.

How Army Discharge System Will Work

WASHINGTON, May 10—(UPI)—Your soldier needs 85 points to be eligible for immediate discharge. WACs need only 44. Here in brief is how the points are figured:

1 point for each month of army service since Sept. 16, 1940.

1 Point for each month of service overseas since Sept. 16, 1940, counted from departure from U. S. port to return.

5 points for each battle participation star.

5 points for each wound for which the purple heart is awarded.

5 points for each decoration. (Overseas campaign ribbons are not decorations).

12 points for each child, up to a limit of three children.

Men who have 85 or more points are immediately eligible for discharge, but it will take about a year to bring home and discharge the more than 1,300,000 men who are going to be released under the point system.

The total of points necessary for discharge will be reduced about six weeks from now.

Men vital for the war against Japan will not be discharged even if they have enough points.

The plan does not apply to Navy and Marine and Coast Guard men.

Bring 'em back for good...sooner!

That final home-coming day! That's what we're all hoping for... praying for...earnestly! But there's a tough road ahead, that road to Tokyo. Don't think it won't be tough. It will take a lot more ships, more B-29's. More tanks, half-tracks, jeeps, and trucks! More rockets, mortars, air-borne radar! More of everything will be needed. And more bonds...we'll have to buy more bonds than ever before. Our mighty armed forces have taken us a long way. To buy more bonds is the least we can do in return.

Service Officer Explains Program To Kiwanis Club

Giving an interesting explanation of the development and functions of Veterans' Aid to discharged service men, Lester L. Wilson, recently appointed Pulaski county service officer, addressed the Winamac Kiwanis club Tuesday noon.

Mr. Wilson reviewed the growth of organizations to aid veterans following World War I, which culminated in the Veterans' Administration in 1930, and presented in outline the formation this year of the Indiana State Bureau of Veterans' Affairs.

Pulaski County (IN) Democrat 15 Nov 1945: 1.

The present system of county service officers, Mr. Wilson emphasized, is a community service and thus has closer contact between the veteran and local affairs than would state or national organizations.

Nearly fifty percent of the inquiries made at his office by returning veterans are concerned with the education program under the GI Bill of Rights, Mr. Wilson reported. Other problems confronting discharges include re-employment, disability claims and government insurance.

After V-J Day, the Kingsbury Ordnance Plant became a storage facility. During the last years of the war, 20,000 workers were employed, producing a half-billion shells.

$3,000,000 Project At Kingsbury Plant

LA PORTE, Ind. — (UP) — A $3,000,000 construction project at the Kingsbury ordnance plant to augment facilities for making many types of ammunition for the armed forces was announced Tuesday by Maj. T. H. Bradley, new commanding officer at the plant.

Bradley and J. O. Brown, president of Todd & Brown, Inc., plant operators, said that work on the project would get under way within the next 10 days to modernize and supplement loading lines and warehouses at the huge war plant.

Logansport (IN) Pharos-Tribune 31 Jan 1945: 3.

Contract for the work has been awarded to the H. K. Ferguson company, Inc., Cleveland. O. Robert E. Miller of the contracting firm estimated that 1,200 laborers, mechanics and office workers would be needed for the job.

Bradley announced the program after arriving directly from the China-Burma-India theater of war to succeed Maj. F. H. Phillips as commanding officer at Kingsbury. Phillips has been assigned to the Cornhusker ordnance plant at Grand Island, Neb.

To Enlarge Loading Lines at Kingsbury Plant

Announcement of immediate expansion of the heavy ammunition problem at Kingsbury ordnance plant has been made by Maj. T. H. Bradley, commanding officer, and J. O. Brown, president of Todd & Brown, Inc., plant operator.

New construction to cost in excess of $3,000,000 will be started within the next ten days with the H. K. Ferguson Company, Inc., of Cleveland, Ohio, in charge. This construction will consist of modernizing and supplementing present loading lines and warehouses to provide facilities for producing new types of ammunition now needed by the armed forces.

Although no great fluctuation in personnel in shell loading operations is expected, Robert E. Miller, personnel manager of the Ferguson Company, estimates 1200 laborers, mechanics and office workers will be needed in construction work.

No Job Cut-Back At Kingsbury

Whether Germany surrenders or not, production will continue at the Kingsbury Ordnance Plant at approximately the same pace.

According to Maj. T. H. Bradley, Commanding Officer, the recent cutback announced by the war department will not be felt at KOP. Moreover, revised production schedules for the LaPorte county loading plant call for a slight increase in the number of workers needed.

For that reason the plant is continuing to recruit additional employees to meet these schedules and to provide replacements.

The Pacific war has not as yet reached the stage where American and Jap forces stand toe to toe and throw tons of explosives at each other as in Europe. Thousands of miles of Jap territory remain to be conquered and millions of Japan's best soldiers have yet to be met and crushed.

Many items loaded at KOP are of the type that will be used in this concentrated campaign against Japan after the German surrender.

Kingsbury Ordnance Plant interviewers will be in Winamac, at the court house, each Monday and Tuesday to sign up applicants for this essential war work.

Starting wages at KOP are 70¢ per hour for women and 90¢ per hour for men. U.S.E.S. referral must be obtainable.

Statistics on Kingsbury Are Released

Record Shows Nearly Half Billion Shells Loaded at Big Plant

The Kingsbury ordnance plant, scene of active war work by hundreds of Pulaski county people during the last five years, is now being reduced to a stand-by status, according to announcement by Lieut. Col. Thomas H. Bradley, commanding officer for the Army.

Kingsford Heights, the ghost town which was built on grandiose lines, only to disappoint its federal sponsors in its attraction of residents, is dwindling to a few family-occupied homes.

Last Saturday, for the first time, details of the true extent of the Kingsbury plant were disclosed.

Spread over 1300 acres of LaPorte county land, and costing between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 to erect, the plant produced almost a half-billion loaded components, ranging from grenades and land mines to 106 mm. artillery shells. Five workers at the plant were killed in plant accidents.

Peak Employment, 20,000.

The level of employment at Kingsbury always was a military secret, but it can be told now that late in 1942 and early in 1943, when the allies were struggling to swing over to the offensive, more than 20,000 manned the establishment, which received five army "E" awards for efficiency.

Carved into the countryside as it was, KOP called for war housing to shelter the thousands of migratory workers. But the housing planners overbuilt the town of Kingsford Heights and when most of its 3,000 homes went beginning, 1900 or more were dismantled and hauled away to other war centers.

In the summer of 1944 only 1000 or so were left, and when the Japs gave up only 600 houses were in use.

Started Just Five Years Ago.

Plans for the creation of Kingsbury were announced in September, 1940. Work started at once. Thousands were employed in its construction. Near-by Walkerton got a new schoolhouse and housing included dormitories which were never popular and never fully utilized. War housing, all government built, sprang up in Knox and LaPorte. That was before Kingsbury Heights came into the picture.

By the following summer the plant, then known as the Union Center shell loading plant, was producing. The first shell came off the loading line August 21 and was presented to Henry F. Schricker, then governor of Indiana.

Todd & Brown, Inc., of New York City, was the operator for the government from start to finish. All of the construction work was done by the firms of Bates & Rogers and the Furguson Construction Co.

Way Up, Then Way Down.

At first the shell and other munitions came in a trickle from the plant. Then they came in a torrent so great that the working force gradually was reduced. The fall of Japan found but 6000 on the job. Today about 2500 are engaged in reducing the plant to a stand-by status.

Until the plant was "cut in" on the Northern Indiana Public Service company lines about eighteen months ago, it consumed (CONTINUED ON PAGE THREE)

KOP encompassed an estimated 1200 buildings of all kinds, with a floor space of approximately 3,000,000 square feet. In the plant were seventy-eight miles of railroad track and ninety-eight miles of hard-surfaced road. The telephone system digested a quarter million calls a week, the equivalent of the normal for an average city of 30,000 people.

Col. Bradley has announced that the plant will not be declared excess, as some have, and be disposed of, but will be maintained as a permanent military installation.

No Sales at Kingsbury

In response to numerous inquiries regarding the disposition of excess material, Lt. Col. Thos. H. Bradley, commanding officer of the Kingsbury ordnance plant, has announced that at the present time no properties of any nature are being offered for sale to the public. He adds that rumors that trucks, cars, machinery, office equipment and supplies are being sold at the plant are unfounded.

Kingsford Heights Nears 'Ghost Town' Proportions

A growing exodus from Indiana's "ghost town," the illfated model town of Kingsford Heights was reported this week.

Occupancy was down to 380 units a decrease of 130 in the last week, and from ten to fifteen families are leaving daily, Harry J. Schneider, project manager, said.

Most of those departing were workers released from the Kingsbury ordnance plant, which is being placed on a standby basis.

The Kingsford Heights school opened on an eight room basis but the modern brick building seemed doomed for an early closing, Schneider said.

The school, erected for an attendance of more than 1,000 pupils, had about 200 on opening day.

Kingsbury Plant Is - Is Not - Declared Surplus Property

Whether or not the Kingsbury ordnance plant is to be declared surplus government property and disposed of as such, is a question that caused conflicting comment in official Washington last week.

Early in the week, it was reported that the plant, along with five other similar industries in the state, would be declared surplus in the near future. The announcement stated that the federal government was preparing to dispose of seven Indiana ordnance plants valued at $136,000,000. The seventh plant is already on the government's surplus list.

Hardly had the announcement been made when a denial was released saying the whole thing had been a mistake. The original story and the denial were reported by different press services.
